FIREMEN WAGE TALKS BREAK OFF

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Negotiations between the city of Victoria and its firefighters broke off today, with the possibility still looming that a strike could deprive city residents of normal fire protection services.

"We have finished negotiating and now it's action time," reporters were told this morning by Ross Cameron, president of the Victoria firefighters union, following a 75-minute meeting with city manager Jim Bramley.

Cameron said the executive will present a recommendation to a membership meeting tonight, but he declined to say whether the recommendation will be for strike action or for submission of the dispute to arbitration.

He said as a result of this morning's meeting, and an informational meeting Monday with members of Victoria city council, the executive has been able to "establish a positive position as far as a recommendation is concerned ... on what the city fears most, a strike or a (arbitration) board."

Bramley said the union indicated it was still not prepared to budge from its original demand for wage parity with Vancouver, which would involve a 21.8 per cent increase in a one-year contract. The city has offered 17.5 per cent.

The 104-member local of the International Association of Firefighters has taken a strike vote but has not served 72-hour strike notice.

If strike procedure is implemented, mediator Clark Gilmour must first withdraw from the dispute. Only after the union has been notified by Labor Minister Bill King that Gilmour has turned in his report will it be in a legal position to strike.

Cameron said today the firefighters recognize the far-reaching implications of a strike decision.

"It's not something we would enter into lightly. We completely realize the responsibility we have got," he added.

Fire Chief Eric Simmons said until the union's next step is known he would prefer not to comment on what steps might be taken to maintain normal fire protection in the event of a strike.

"It might not come to that," he said.

12% RATE FORECAST

Mortgages to Jump

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Mortgage rates have risen to the range of 11.5 to 11.75 per cent across Victoria and may hit 12 per cent for the first time this year.

A spokesman for the Victoria office of Montreal Trust said a 12 per cent rate is "a strong possibility" very soon following a decision by the company to raise its 5-year deposit rate to 10 per cent this week.

He said the company normally maintains a gap of from 1.5 to 2 per cent between the deposit rate and the mortgage rate. The fact the deposit rate was going up is a strong indication of the direction of mortgage rates, he said.

Mortgage rates hit a peak of 12.5 to 12.75 in the Victoria area in the spring of 1974 and levelled off to 12 per cent last fall.

In January the rates fell to 11.5 and then down to 10.5 per cent in March. They have resumed their upward climb.

A spokesman for Canada Trust in Victoria said the company has raised its mortgage rate to 11.75 per cent for 5-year term mortgages but declined to speculate on how soon the rate might hit 12 per cent. The company offers lower rates for short-term mortgages of three years or less.

Japanese Giant Folds

TOKYO (AP) — Kohjin Co., a diversified pulp, textile and real estate concern with sales of more than $225 million a year, announced today it will apply for bankruptcy. It will be Japan's biggest corporate failure since the end of the Second World War.

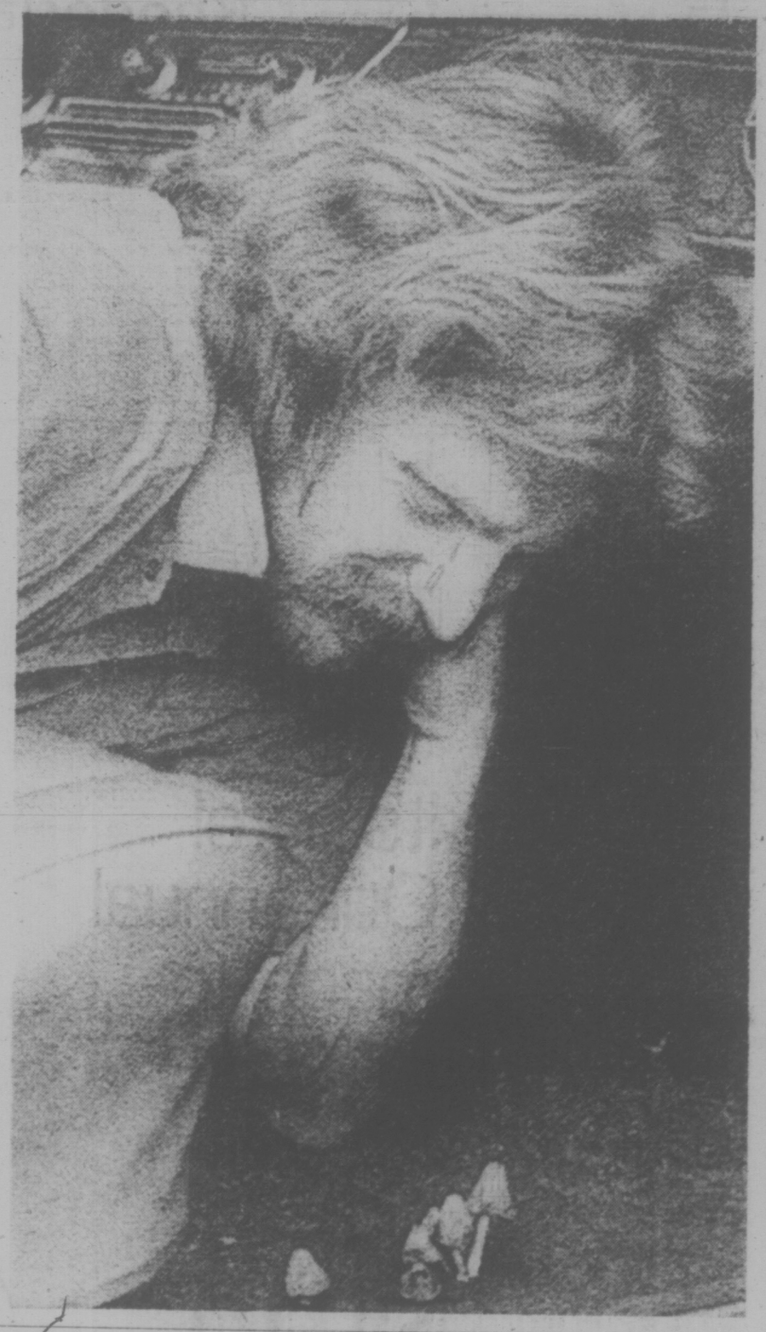
The news stunned the Japanese business community, which has been hit hard by the world recession and steep oil prices. Teiichiro Morinaga, governor of the central bank, delayed his departure for the International Monetary Fund annual meeting in Washington to deal with the crisis.

Morinaga attributed the Kohjin failure to poor management but said the Bank of Japan will ask Japanese financial institutions to make sure it does not result in a chain reaction of bankruptcies.

Kohjin, capitalized at $20 million, reported sales of $100.5 million in the six months that ended in April, down from $123 million in the preceding six months. It reported an operating loss of more than $18 million in the six months ended in April.

Kohjin—founded in 1937 as a rayon producer but later diversified into textiles, pharmaceuticals, housing, paper, pulp and other lines—is tentatively estimated to have liabilities of about $450 million, or $600 million if its 39 affiliates are included.

It employs about 3,800 persons, mostly in Japan. Its only overseas subsidiary is Sarawak Woodchip Co. in Malaysia.



MOBILE mushrooms were discovered by Robert Haddon when he checked his car after it had been sitting for some time in the shade of a tree. Edible Inky Cap mushrooms, whose seeds likely blew in an open window, found favorable growing conditions in dirt on the carpet.

Smith Blamed In Breakdown

LIVINGSTONE, Zambia (Reuter) — Rhodesian constitutional talks ended here today with the leader of the black nationalist delegation accusing Prime Minister Ian Smith of wrecking them.

"Mr. Ian Smith had decided to wreck the conference," Bishop Abel Muzorewa, president of the African National Council (ANC), said at a news conference.

"We said that we would want all our people to be covered by immunity and this we put forward to him (Ian Smith)," Bishop Muzorewa said, referring to negotiations over where the talks on a new constitution would continue.

The white-minority government headed by Smith insists that the talks continue on Rhodesian soil, but the ANC fears some of its members might be arrested if the talks break down and they are still in Rhodesia.

"We believed that everybody else who participated in the opening conference agreed that this was reasonable, and then he (Mr. Smith) has not, so that actually we are waiting for him to come back to us."

Earlier, Bishop Muzorewa said the Rhodesian talks are not deadlocked and have not broken down.

He made his earlier statement after meeting here with Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda.

Before the bishop spoke, evidence was growing that the talks were in trouble and that at least the current, opening phase of the bargaining is at an end.

Sources close to the ANC made clear that the two sides had failed to agree, in talks going on far into last night, on terms for later committee sessions to be held inside Rhodesia.

Mideast Peace This Weekend?

Times News Services

Henry Kissinger flew back to Egypt today with the draft of an Israeli-approved interim peace treaty.

Political sources in Alexandria said the accord could be initialled Friday or Saturday. It would go into immediate effect.

"We are making remarkable progress towards an agreement and a nervous breakdown and it's going to be a race to see which will be achieved first," Kissinger said on emerging from a six-hour negotiating session with Israeli leaders.

Foreign Minister Yigal Allon said: "I have the feeling that during the last two days we achieved remarkable progress towards conclusion of an interim agreement and we are much closer to a positive conclusion than ever since the shuttle was resumed.

"We are no longer working on either an Israeli or an Egyptian draft agreement," Kissinger said.

"We are working on a text that is partially agreed and partially disagreed. When it is finally finished it will be the common consensus of both sides."

In radio interviews, Allon said Israel would lose one-seventh of the Sinai — taken by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war — to Egypt.

There would be a new and wider UN buffer zone.

Egyptian forces and the United Nations now occupy about one-tenth of the peninsula.

He said the Egyptian strip on the east bank of the Suez Canal would be widened from 10 miles to 13 miles by taking over the current UN buffer zone.

Moreover, Egyptians would be given about four square kilometers of territory now held by Israel to the south of the canal to give them easier access to the Abu Rodei Rodeis oil fields being ceded by the Israelis.

The foreign minister said the Egyptians have agreed to Israeli demands for allowing U.S. volunteer technicians to set up two manned early warning stations in the Mitla and Gidi passes of the buffer zone.

Kissinger, however, has said Washington would not implement the technician plan unless it receives Congressional approval.

PARAMEDICS FAVOR PACT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Paramedical workers at 81 British Columbia hospitals including Victoria General and Royal Jubilee have voted 91 per cent in favor of accepting a one-year contract providing an average wage increase of 17 per cent, a union spokesman said Monday.

Jack Campbell, president of the Health Sciences Association, said 80 per cent of the 2,500 members voted on the contract during a four-week mail ballot. The contract is retroactive to Jan. 1.

Stock-Up Warning From Supermarkets

Shop a bit early this week and stock up a little.

That's the word from a local supermarket executive as a labor dispute threatens to shut down 16 supermarkets in Greater Victoria.

Jack Fiddler, district manager for Safeway's Victoria district, said any local shutdown depends on whether meat cutters strike Super-Valu on the Lower Mainland.

There are 10 Safeway, five Shop Easy and a single Maverick store involved locally.

The meat cutters' division of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers served 72-hour strike notice Monday against 21 Super-Valu stores. The stores in Greater Victoria are part of the B.C. Food Industry Labor Relations Council, which is bargaining with three unions, among them bakers and meat cutters.

On Monday the food council served 72-hour lockout notice on bakery workers employed by its member supermarkets.

Only Safeway workers at Fort and Foul Bay are affected by that move. Most of the bread on Vancouver Island is supplied by McDonalds, which is not involved in the dispute. There are as well a number of independent bakeries.

The lockout move followed a strike at one commercial bakery last week and serving of strike notice at three more, leaving Lower Mainland consumers wihout 80 per cent of their regular bread supplies

Council spokesman Bill MacDonald said the supermarket operators decided to shut down the 42 in-store bakeries to reduce chances of picketing by members of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers Union, the Retail Clerks International Association and the meatcutters.

If members of the three unions picket the stores, about 50 per cent of the supermarkets in the lower mainland will be closed. The nine council members operate 111 stores in the Lower Mainland and southern Vancouver Island.

George Johnson of the meatcutters said his 750-member union has not decided how to react to the lockout notice against the in-store bakery workers.

He said meatcutters served 72-hour strike notice Monday against 21 Super Valu stores, corporate members of Kelly Douglas Ltd. The notice was not served to franchise members of the chain.

He said Monday's strike notice, which will affect 150 union members, was not served as a reaction to the council's decision to lock out.

"We would have done it anyway."

About 100 members of the bakery union went on strike

Trio Reinstated At Victorian

Three members of the International Typographical Union will be reinstated to their jobs at the Victorian newspaper by Thursday, newspaper publisher John Damgaard said today.

Damgaard said he will comply with an order of the Labor Relations Board in Vancouver Monday which said that the employees must be reinstated by Aug. 28.

Chaired by John Baigent, the board hearing also found that the picketing action of members of the ITU is in violation of the labor code and must be diqcontinued immediately, said Damgaard.

The three employees — Richard Groenheyde, Susan MacKenzie and Terry Wickstrom — were discharged a year ago and a previous LRB order ruled that the newspaper "did unlawfully discharge ... for the reason that the employees are members of a trade union."

Damgaard said the employees were placed on the payroll in response to that order at the end of July, but the ITU argued the employees were not reinstated to employment although they are being paid.

The latest round of picketing started Aug. 7.

Ed Fairbairn, president of the ITU Local 226 said today he expects to receive written confirmation of the board's ruling later today and he declined to indicate the decision.

Huge Claims Backlog at ICBC

A horrendous backlog of work awaits the 56 Insurance Corporation of B.C. workers in Victoria if their 1,400-member union agrees to a first contract.

The Victoria claims centre workers will vote at noon Wednesday in the Union Centre, 2750 Quadra, on the recommendations of industrial inquiry commissioner Dr. Noel Hall.

The Office and Technical Employees Union, on strike for 15 weeks against ICBC, is being advised to accept the report by the negotiating committee. ICBC directors are expected to accept the report. By Friday, it should be known if the strike is over.

Hall's report recommends a compound increase of 39.5 per cent over 28 months, retroactive to June, 1974.

In Victoria, OTEU shop steward Wayne Koski said he doesn't know how the backlog of work and new claims can be handled.

Before the strike, there were 32 adjusters handling an average of 700 claims a week.

"We only had sufficient staff to keep up with the work before, and then we had to work overtime," he said.

When the strike began, 4,000 claims were being processed.

Assuming 700 claims a week through the 15-week strike, there would be 10,500 back claims, plus the 4,000 claims that were in process, plus an average of 700 a week in new claims, he said.

Local bodyshop spokesman Denis Butner said "not that many" Victoria men were laid off by shops while customers parked or drove damaged cars while the strike lasted.

But asked if he expects a lot of work, he said "we surely are."

Koski said the dollars and cents of the proposed settlement are "not too bad" but the claims centres are to get a four-day week when it was originally the head office staff who wanted it, but the head office staff will get a five-day week.

He said claims centre staff will work 33 hours and 40 minutes over four days while head office staff will work 35 hours over five days.

The extra day off for claims centre people will be rotating.

Ray Warren, a spokesman in Vancouver for the OTEU, said the union executive is not pleased with all the terms of the Hall report but believed the time was right to return to work.

Since the OTEU began its strike May 20, Many of its members already have decided not to return to work at the crown corporation after strike pay ran out earlier this month. But only a handful in Victoria left.

Latest offer from the corporation included a 34-per-cent wage increase during a 27-month term while the union had been asking for an increase of 43 per cent during a 28-month contract.

Hall's report recommends the striking workers receive an increase of 15 per cent June 1, 1974, another eight per cent increase Nov. 1, 1974, six per cent the next month and another six-per-cent increase from March, 1975.

Further details of the report were unavailable.

OTEU workers had rejected the corporation's last offer by 85.5 per cent in voting during the first week of August.

The strike has prevented the processing of claims and repair work through ICBC centres and has depleted a $300,000 defence fund set up by the OTEU.

Police, Fire Unions Slammed by Oak Bay Council

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith and Ald. John Goult lashed out Monday night at fire and police unions involved in current negotiations in the area.

They took particular aim at the policy position adopted by city firefighters that if they strike, they will work to protect "life and limb" but property alone will be left to burn.

They also criticized city firefighters for announcing they will picket any volunteer firefighters and said they had been told firefighters plan to turn hoses on supervisors from suburban forces who try to protect property.

Smith said Oak Bay has a commitment that it will pay its police the same increase won by Victoria police.

But, he added, the single-family taxpayer can't afford to pay 23 per cent wage increases.

And, he said, "I'll never, ever, agree to sign denticare unless ordered by council."

He said a dental care plan, common in union contracts, is a federal or provincial responsibility and not the responsibility of "taxpayers being taxed from their homes."

He said Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen has "taken a responsible line" in opposing, with council, an agreement reached between the city police commission and the union.

"I'm glad they've taken a tough line," he said.

Council agreed to financially support city council in its fight to stop the police union from obtaining a Labor Relations Board order that the agreement between the union and the police commission is valid.

Ald. Goult said Oak Bay has indicated to its firefighters it is prepared to accept the city settlement, when it is negotiated, in this area.

But, he added, it is a "fantastic prospect" that city firefighters are prepared to allow property to burn and that suburban forces, if called in, will also follow a policy of securing only life and limb.

There had been "threats of physical violence" to any non-union officers who perform work during this dispute, he said, saying later this referred to turning hoses on supervisors.

If elected representatives submitted to "threats of blackmail" they will have "abdicated government to elements that have showed they have no respect for persons or property."

He said the "whole thing, to a degree" can be blamed on inflation with the federal government doing nothing and the provincial goverment giving its employees big raises.

He said the San Francisco policemen, who went on strike, got a pay raise of 13 per cent which was described as a "great settlement" in the United States.

"It really puts things in perspective with settlements here of 23-24 to 34 per cent," he said.

Smith said if the provincial government doesn't outlaw strikes by policemen and firefighters "they'll be a public uprising."

Referring to threats to picket the homes or businesses of volunteer firefighters if there is a strike, Smith said "it absolutey appals me. We can't give in to this kind of pressure."

Strike Looms: City, Firemen at Impasse

ly criticized and pleaded with the firefighters' representatives.

He said he found "absolutely horrifying" their recent statement that in a strike situation they would be prepared to save lives but not necessarily property, and would picket businesses of anyone attempting to fight a fire.

"How can we sit down at the bargaining table with you when you've got a torch in your panels and say 'We're going to let you burn, you bastards'?" Pollen asked.

"Yo've got a torch, the police have got a gun and we might as well face the fact there's no collective bargaining involved," he said.

Pollen said he would not succumb to "coercive threats" and vote for a settlement which wold give firefighters more than a 17.5 per cent increase.

He told Cameron that Victoria firefighters enjoy some of the highest salaries and most generous fringe benefits in the community, and they are "part of the best-paid civil service in the world."

"I have driven by your parking lot and seen some of your wheels," he said.

The mayor several times appealed to the union representatives to take a responsible attitude in their wage demands, "to take a slice of the pie, yes, but not too big," and said this might well start a "wave" of similarly responsible union actions across the country.

"I think the buck has got to stop here or we are going to be part of the total collapse of this community . . . If we don't get some of these outlandish increases under control we are going to go to hell financially," he warned.

Pollen said while council has a responsibility to ensure that its firefighters are adequately paid and protected against inflation, it has an even greater responsibility to the taxpayers of the city.

There were 300 applicants on the waiting list to join the fire department, he said, indicating the job is not too onerous or poorly-paid.

"When you became firemen we didn't guarantee you would become the highest-paid firemen in B.C. or in Canada," he added.

Ald. Mike Young accused the union of hyprocrisy in indicating it was willing to negotiate, when in fact it had adopted the completely inflexible position of parity with Vancouver.

Cameron replied that the city itself was inflexible, and said its idea of negotiation was to ensure that firefighters were paid less than their counterparts in the Lower Mainland and other parts of te province.

To meet the city's version of negotiation, he said, the union could have asked initially for 35 per cent and worked down from that figure. Instead, it had settled on a fair and reasonable demand at the outset.

Cameron noted that only twice in the last 20 years had city firefighters been able to settle wage negotiations without arbitration.

In the current situation the union could have opted for arbitration and obtained approximately what it was asking, but instead had chosen to try to negotiate a settlement.

When Pollen said Canadian unions are not justifying their wage demands by increased productivity, Cameron argued that the measure of Victoria firefighters' productivity is the ever-increasing number of buildings for which they must provide fire protection.

Last year alone the city issued building permits worth a total of $74 million, he noted.

Mortgage Rate Nears 12 Per Cent in City

merce said mortgage rates tend to rise at this time of year. Banks normally have fiscal years ending Oct. 31.

As a result, many banks run low on mortgage funds in September and October, having gone through their year's alotlment. The scarcity of funds drives interest rates up.

For example, bank interest rates have gone up to 11.5 per cent from 11.25 per cent in the past 45 days. In addition, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce one month ago was loaning funds out to a total of $50,000 per residence. Now it has reduced this maximum to $35,000 and only to existing customers of the bank.

Whether rates will cool off in November when new allotments are made depends on the size of the allotment and the extent of the demand for funds.

Before mortgages began to soar in the 1973-1975 period, the previous all-time high was October, 1969, when rates went to 10.5 per cent. The peak was reached at the end of the bank's fiscal year, which is a normal but not rigid pattern.

Friday against Weston Bakeries Ltd., a food council member. The council then served 72-hour strike notice, effective Monday, on union members at three other commerical bakeries — Empress Foods Ltd., Mrs. Willman's Baking and Mother Hubbard Bakery Ltd.

MacDonald said the council decided to shut down the in-store bakeries because "in this way, the vast majority of our employees will not be put out of work and the public will be able to buy everything but in-store bakery products."

In-store bakery employees represent about three per cent of the 4,500 e mployees of food council members.

The strike-lockout situation follows Friday's expiration of Clive McKee's term as industrial inquiry commissioner.

He made no recommendations to Labor Minister King. His report said the sides were too far apart to make recommendations.

MacDonald said Monday he regretted the lack of recommendations because "it is my view that he failed in his responsibility to the consumers, employees and employers who will be adversely affected by this dispute."

Rhodesia Talks Break Down

bury from the conference site, saying the talks had not broken down but the next step was up to the ANC. The special South African railway train, parked on the Victoria Falls Bridge between Zambia and Rhodesia for the talks, was sent back to Pretoria.

Kaunda, who attended Monday's session with South African Premier John Vorster to lend weight to the bid for a settlement, will likely fly back to Lusaka later today. He held separate talks with South African Foreign Minister Hilgard Muller and Rhodesian black nationalist leaders.

On the problem of later talks inside Rhodesia, sources close to the ANC said the nationalist groups had made a major concession in agreeing that committee meetings can be held inside the country — provided Smith gave ample guarantees of safety to individual ANC members, some of whom could face arrest in their homeland.

The sources said Smith had rejected this and offered security guarantees only to nationalists residing in Rhodesia. This would exclude leading militarists James Chikerema and Ndabaningi Sithole, who are in exile.

The holding of committee sessions inside Rhodesia was specified in an agreement signed in Pretoria in June by Smith, Vorster and Kuanda's political adviser, Mark Chona. Smith insists that the agreement must be kept.

PARTIAL WELFARE TRIMS

SURREY (CP) — Council Monday night approved three-quarters of Mayor Bill Vander Zalm's plan for dealing with soaring welfare rolls and welfare fraud in the municipality.

Council endorsed the mayor's recommendation to rescind last week's resolution which would have cut all 19- to 45-year-old employable single persons without dependants off welfare. It voted to make payments when jobs are not available but to cut off the 19- to 45-year-old single employables without dependants when jobs are available.

investigator staff to two from one but did not approve Vander Zalm's recommendation to double the job-finder's staff to four from two.

Finally, council authorized Vander Zalm to meet next month with welfare officials and union leaders to draft a plan for a federal-provincial-municipal make-work program as an alternative to welfare.

Once the plan is prepared it is to come back to council and if passed subsequently to go to the Union of B.C. Municipalities and Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities for endorsement.

Trials Slated For September In Tub Riot

NANAIMO — Trial dates save been set for Sept. 24, 25 and 26 for most of those people charged with unlawful assembly in a near-riot in Nanaimo July 20 a spokesman for the provincial court in Nanaimo said today.

The spokesman said charges have been laid against about 40 of the 78 people arrested when a crowd estimated at 500 went on a bottle-throwing rampage through downtown Nanaimo the eve of the Nanaimo - to - Vancouver bathtub race.

Eleven of those charged appeared in provincial court Monday — four others today — all pleaded not guilty and were remanded for trial.

Law to Protect Juvenile Rights

QUEBEC (CP) — The federal government is preparing legislation to protect juvenile offenders from indefinite periods of detention, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand told the 57th annual meeting of the Canadian Bar Association (CBA) Monday.

Mr. Allmand, attending the CBA meeting as just "a member of the bar," ended up reassuring concerned delegates at a convention workshop that new legislation would be introduced in Parliament "before it adjourns next summer" in order to safeguard the rights of juvenile offenders.

In a resolution introduced before the family law section, the CBA declared that every child before the courts should have the right to a lawyer and to the same guarantees the judicial system provides for adults.

Mr. Allmand added that the public will be given details of the legislation Sept. 22 so that interested groups have a chance to suggest changes.

Meanwhile, Justice Minister Otto Lang denied that the federal cabinet "automatically" commutes the death penalty to life imprisonment.

Rather, he said in an interview here, the cabinet considers "very carefully" the fate of a person found guilty of murdering a police officer or prison guard.

Mr. Lng was responding to a CBA council resolution calling on the cabinet to uphold the death penalty for murderers of policemen and prison guards.

The CBA resolution said commutation should be exercised on the "merits and special circumstances" of each case.

"We are doing exactly what they ask," said Mr. Lang.

William Sommerville, CBA president, told the delegates Monday they must remain vigilant in their defence of individual rights against further encroachment by the state and bureaucracy.

Mr. Sommerville"s remarks drew the praise of Quebec Justice Minister Gerard Levesque, who admitted the state would continue to play a growing role in the lives of its citizens.

"Faced with this phenomenon," said the justice minister, "we must avoid at all costs making man, as a citizen, another number which obeys a computer."

Earlier, Chief Justice Bora Lasin of the Supreme Court of Canada told the delegates the nation's highest court is too often a testing ground for inexperienced lawyers.

Addressing 2,100 lawyers at a luncheon honoring the Supreme Court's 100th anniversary, Mr. Justice Laskin indicated government representation in particular was not always of desired calibre.

"While we always expect and often get the best of counsel," he told the delegates, "there are still too many instances where we appear to be testing grounds for the inexperienced.

Salary Boost Delay

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Police and firemen won't get hefty pay raises won in last week's strike until mounting suits are settled in the courts.

City attorney Thomas O'Connor gave those instructions to the controller as the backlash against the strike settlement mounted Monday.

Gov. Edmund Brown jr. charged the walkout was conducted "illegally and with brute force" and the city Board of Supervisors overturned two vetoes by Mayor Joseph Alioto to clear the way for strike-related charter amendments on the November ballot.

In Superior Court, presiding Judge Robert Drewes issued contempt citations today against three policemen who, when served citations, had defied the judge's order to return to work last week.

"I'm not going to let them forget it," the judge said.

He also scheduled a hearing Sept. 18 on a suit designed to block the pay raises. The suit contends the setting of municipal employees' pay is under the domain of the Board of Supervisors, not the mayor.

Another lawsuit against the pay raises was to be filed today by teh chamber of commerce in co-operation with neighborhood groups, according to the chamber's James Haynes.

10% Hike Now Forecast In Price of Arab Oil

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The finance minister of Kuwait predicted today that, as a result of the shrinking U.S. dollar, oil prices will jump 10 per cent when the OPEC countries meet next month.

Abdulrahman Salem al-Teeqy told a news conference that de-control of oil prices here will help Kuwait as much as the United States, that Americans waste energy and that the oil companies are to blame for the high cost of oil.

"The OPEC countries never increased their prices for the sake of increase," he said. "OPEC prices have been depressed for 23 years and no one is willing to consider this."

The oil companies make money transporting, refining and distributing oil while OPEC countries receive only a small percentage from a posted price, he claimed.

In Washington, meanwhile, Senate investigators are looking into the possibility that U.S. banks have become so dependent upon the deposits of oil-producing nations that they could be ruined by sudden withdrawal of those funds.

The senate foreign relations subcommittee on multinational banks is seeking to learn whether deposits by oil-producing nations have become so large a part of bank assets that withdrawal of the deposits would threaten the banks' existence — and perhaps even the entire U.S. banking system.

The panel wants to know if the banks may be vulnerable to blackmail — willing to meet the oil producers' political goals under threat of withdrawal of funds.

Nixon Tape Claims To Court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The justice department Monday asked the courts to sort out conflicting custody claims over the presidential papers and tapes of Richard M. Nixon so a Senate panel can get on with its probe of the CIA.

The department appealed to a U.S. District Court in behalf of two administration officials, White House counsel Philip Buchen and general services administrator Arthur F. Sampson.

Last October, these two men were placed in charge of the large collection of data now stored in an executive office building.

The justice department said Buchen and Sampson were placed in "unreasonable jeopardy" because they are in charge of the material sought and because Nixon has put in a counter claim, insisting that the documents and tapes are his.

Burnaby Backed Over Licences

Oak Bay council will support Burnaby in a resolution to the Union of B.C. Municipalities which criticizes the provincial government for reducing local control over community care facilities.

Amendments at the last session of the legislature take away the need for community care facilities to meet municipal electrical, plumbing, building and zoning regulations and bylaws, the resolution says.

This leaves only bylaws relating to fire and health applying to such facilities.

The Burnaby resolution warns that the amendments to the Community Care Facilities Licensing Act mean a community care facility "may now locate anywhere in a municipality, regardless of zoning, which could frustrate the proper planning of an area or detrimentally affect adjoining land uses."

The resolution asks the provincial government to amend the act to make mandatory compliance with municipal, electrical, plumbing, building and zoning regulations and bylaws.

Ald. Shirley Dowell told council Monday night that since the Burnaby resolution "embodies our concern regarding this act, I would suggest that this council support this resolution at the (UBCM) convention.".

REVAMPED SCHEME FOR BLOCK

A redesigned and reduced apartment block for the corner of Newport and Windsor in Oak Bay was presented to council Monday night by Greenbank Designs Contracts Division Limited.

The new proposal, Adrian Greenbank told council, takes one floor and the penthouse away and reduces the over-all size by 4,000 square feet.

The building, which would contain 20 condominium apartments and a gourmet restaurant with underground parking, would stand five storeys or 45 feet above ground, he said.

Council voted to send the proposal to committee to recommend whether or not a land-use contract be entered into. Any land-use contract would have to go before a public hearing.

Pool, Arena Fees Slated by Oak Bay

Oak Bay council voted to approve a schedule of fees Monday night for the recreation centre which will correspond to charges in the city.

Ald. Doug McLelland said "basically, we have followed the admission rates for Victoria for swimming and the arena."

General admission to the recreation centre's pool and arena will be 50 cents for children, 75 cents for students, $1 for adults and 50 cents for senior citizens. Pre-schoolers will be admitted free.

For the curling rink, council approved $8 per sheet for two hours for senior curlers in the daytime, $12 per sheet for two hours for women in morning or afternoon, $18 per sheet for two hours for league curling and, for Sunday curlers, $16 per sheet for two hours and $125 for six sheets for the day.

The recreation centre is nearing completion behind Oak Bay junior high school near the intersection of Foul Bay Road and Fort Street-Cadboro Bay Road. It is due to open in October.

New NDP Policy Needed

The provincial government has been challenged on a fundamental issue and by its own B.C. Energy Commission. The commission has recommended that private industry be allowed higher profits to encourage it to resume exploring for natural gas.

This conclusion does not come from private industry, although businessmen have said it often enough, but from the commission appointed by the Barrett governmet to plan energy policy. It would represent a surprising reversal, if it is accepted by the government.

Barrett has argued that natural resources belong to the people, who are entitled to a large share in the benefits. This, in practice, means high royalties and other taxes on private industry, with the benefits flowing into the provincial treasury. Further, Barrett has argued that in the case of depleting resources such as copper, oil, coal and natural gas, he is not concerned if production declines. It is better that the resources stay in the ground than that they go out with only minimal benefit to the people of B.C.

That's the theory. Reality, unfortunately, is something else. The commission toured the province and saw first hand the effects of the policy that deliberately permits development to decline.

The commission said: "Evidence given at the Fort St. John hearing showed that some local businessmen had already moved equipment and men out of the province. Others cannot move and are suffering the recession. Individuals reported reductions in gross income during 1974-1975 by as much as 60 per cent . . .

"This slowdown extends across the entire economy from the part-term worker who farms in the summer and works on oil industry jobs in the winter, to the small contractor whose road maintenance and clearing work is shut down, to the hotels and to the motels and restaurants . . ."

Evidence was presented on behalf of 96 small companies based in Dawson Creek whose business it is to serve oil exploration and development in the province. These people are small businessmen living in the area whose total work force normally numbers about 900, averaging at nine or 10 per company. About 500 of these people are out of work as a result of the low level of activity in the natural gas fields. The layoffs will grow, bankruptcies will begin and skilled workers will leave the province unless there is speedy action, the commission warned.

The policy recommended by the commission is higher prices for natural gas and a hjgher profit level for private companies to encourage them to resume exploration.

It needs to be emphasized yet a third time that this recommendation comes from a commission whose members were appointed by the Barrett government and who understand the Barrett philosophy. The commission has obviously concluded that theory should give way to the economic realities of the day. To underline the urgency of the matter, the commission brought in its report six weeks early, obviously to enable the government to act before the winter drilling season arrives. Without government action, the companies will not drill. The commission points out the companies "have, in effect, gone on strike against the current pricing arrangements."

The commission's report is very convincing, coming as it does, not from industry, nor from neutral bystanders but from friends of the government. It is all very well for the premier to stick to his socialist philosophy of taxing private enterprise to the hilt. But there is more at stake here. There is the question of adequate supplies of natural gas and the survival of the northern communities.

Will the premier permit the northern communities to die just to maintain a theory that has been discredited by his own commission? We sincerely hope not.

Time to Raise the Alarm

Why is there such a strident level of intolerance in British Columbia? It is manifested in large ways — destruction of so-called hippies' homes in the Gulf Islands — and small, such as the refusal of a West Kootenay beer parlor operator to serve patrons with long hair.

On Quadra Island there seems to be an open season on longhairs (and some inoffensive short-haired residents too) whose chief crime seems to be peaceful occupation of vacant crown land. There have been many incidents of destruction — cabins pulled down, shelters put to the torch, dogs shot and killed. After the cabin of one squatter was wrecked, three rope nooses were hung in a tree — "as a joke," said the perpetrator.

A mother lets her two-year-old boy's hair grow into long curls and draws catty comments in the supermarket: "Oh, what a lovely little girl!"

Why such lingering animosity towards long hair? Haight-Ashbury burned itself out almost a decade ago. Woodstock happened long, long ago in 1968. Even civil servants and management trainees wear their hair modishly long nowadays. It shouldn't be worth a second glance, but the sight obviously touches a raw nerve in many folk.

Perhaps these were unconnected and isolated incidents. Perhaps there were circumstances that had nothing to do with hair style. But considered together with scattered incidents of racial violence, they are disturbing evidence of a blossoming narrow-minded prejudice that has no place in what climate, recent history and natural disposition should have made a tolerant, easy-going province.

We aren't Alabama or Uganda yet. But unchecked, the spirit which moves people to burn out peaceful hippies and refuse to do business with clean long-haired individuals, could swell into an ugly passion which holds that all persons with red hair or goatees or yellow skin are second-class citizens.

That is why events as trivial as refusal of service in a beer parlor or destruction of a squatter's cabin should raise the alarm, and why government agencies such as the human rights commission, should take up the fight against prejudice in all forms. If the mob takes away the individual's right to be different, what's left?

" . . . Harold, hurry up . . . your bicycle pool is waiting . . . "

PAUL WHITELAW

No Great Man in U.S. Race

WASHINGTON — A few days ago Senator George McGovern surveyed the crowded field of Democrats and Republicans already in the running to become president in 1976 and uttered what amounted to: "A plague on both your houses."

The South Dakota senator, who will be remembered in history books as the most soundly defeated Democratic presidential nominee in United States history, caustically described the presidential aspirants of both parties as men who stand for nothing.

McGovern's blunt comments might be ascribed to sour grapes — he has never hid his bitterness at being routed in 1972 by Richard Nixon, a man he considers his moral inferior. His justifiable outrage over the Watergate crimes of his opponent conveniently forgets, of course, that American voters found his brand of confused liberalism as bankrupt as they now know Nixon's political morality to be.

However, as next year's election campaign approaches, the senator's assessment of the current class of presidential aspirants is probably shared by a great many Americans.

Little Excitement

Although the aspiring Democrats and Republicans may not all be men who stand for nothing, their policies and personalities are failing to excite the public imagination.

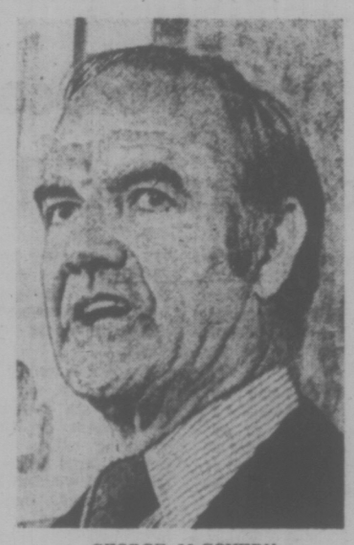
Americans expect greatness in their presidents, or at least that they appear larger-than-life — in the tradition of Lincoln, Roosevelt, or even Johnson and Nixon — and none of the men running for the White House meets that demanding standard.

In a speech before a convention of university student leaders, Senator McGovern attacked President Ford as practising "Nixonism" by rewarding corporate interests with "higher prices, lower taxes and lesser protection for the consumer and the environment." But his sharpest criticism was aimed at his fellow Democrats who are seeking the presidential nomination he won in 1972.

"While the incumbent defends, and seeks to extend, militarism, monopoly and maldistribution of wealth," he stated, "the opposition candidates for the most part offer only to subtract a little here, and a little there and try to be a little decent.

"The prescription for this political season is to offend no one, but the only way to offend no one is to stand for nothing."

The lack of any apparent public interest in the declared candidates of both parties may indicate that Senator McGovern is in tune with the public mood on this question in a way that his policies have never been.



GEORGE McGOVERN
. . . critical of candidates

Senator Henry Jackson of Washington, a hard-liner on foreign policy and defence with a moderate record on domestic issues, was the first to officially declare his entry into the presidential sweepstakes last February. He was followed in quick succession by five other Democrats: Congressman Morris Udall of Arizona, a liberal in the McGovern mold; former Oklahoma senator Fred Harris, something of a prairie populist; Senator Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, a conservative, and former governors Terry Sanford of North Carolina and Jimmy Carter of Georgia, both near the centre of Democratic politics.

On the Republican side, President Ford confirmed in June that he will seek his party's nomination next summer — which was hardly a surprise. The Republicans are traditionally more decorous than the feuding Democrats, and no one else has openly announced his intention to try to steal the nomination from Ford.

Ironically, it is the men who aren't in the running — officially, at least — from either party who are generating what there is of interest or excitement.

For the democrats, of course, that means Senator Edward Kennedy and Alabama Governor George Wallace. Kennedy keeps insisting he won't run, and many Democrats are beginning to believe him. That makes Wallace, a nominal Democrat, even more threatening to fellow members of his adopted party. He is certain to play an important role in the Democratic party next year, and if he becomes unhappy with the course of events, could run as a third party candidate.

Reagan Waiting

While there are no declared opponents of Ford in the Republican ranks, there is one man who is hovering in the wings — former California governor Ronald Reagan. Even if he decides not to run for his party's nomination, the worry he causes Ford is already apparent in the president's attempt to steer his administration ideologically to the right. Reagan's support lies among Republicans who feel Ford is too liberal.

The crowded field of declared candidates of whom Senator McGovern thinks so little is a direct result of his unsuccessful campaign against Richard Nixon and his Watergate crooks. The law-breaking that came to light after the 1972 election — particularly illegal campaign contributions — led to strict new campaign regulations now in effect.

The limits these laws set on campaign spending, and provisions for federal matching funds, have required presidential aspirants to get a head start in collecting thousands of small contributions.

Controls for Health Costs

OTTAWA — If the provincial premiers genuinely wish to promote the health of this country they might undertake to appoint no one except trained economists to their cabinets as ministers of health for the next five years.

Otherwise, this is likely to be a very sick country indeed.

Earlier this week, the present health ministers gathered in Victoria to pour out their anger at the federal government proposal to take firm action to get the soaring costs of health care back under some semblance of control. The ministers showed little restraint and less sense.

Ontario's minister, Frank Miller, announced that "You bet I'm angry" over the federal action and went on to proclaim that he expects his province's costs for Medicare alone to soar by 20 per cent next year. Hospital costs, he reckoned, would be up at least 15 per cent and it really would be surprising if they could be held to that level.

Dennis Cocke, the British Columbia minister, declared that the federal attempts to force through some element of cost control demonstrated "a callous disregard for the health care of Canadians" and threatened a breakdown of national standards of care.

Head of Steam

According to the Saskatchewan minister, W. E. Smishek, the federal action is "high-handed and insensitive and deplorable." He hoped the people of Canada would rise up in rebellion against such federal iniquity and force the central government to backtrack. And so on. The health ministers worked up a fine head of steam.

That projected 20 per cent rise in Ontario's Medicare costs next year needs to be put in a less emotional perspective. It is generally expected that by the time this year is over inflation, on a year against year comparison, will have been about 10 per cent. Next year, economists hope, it may be possible to keep the rise in prices as "low" as eight per cent.

Miller, therefore, is complacent at the prospect that Medicare costs will jump at twice the rate of inflation — a rate that is universally recognized as disastrously high. His public statements show little concern that the province's hospital insurance costs will jump at this year's inflation rate plus 50 per cent.

This is sheer madness. In all provinces, these are major costs, absorbing very large proportions of total revenues. Any currency can, of course, be inflated until it is worthless but except in that suicidal sense no country's resources are unlimited and some effort must be made to keep public spending within the limits of available resources. Any established program with costs multiplying at twice the inflation rate must be brought under control.

Yet Miller and his colleagues had nothing to say except to pour angry words out at the federal ministers, Marc Lalonde of the health department and John Turner of finance. Yet what had these two ministers actually done? If anything, their proposals display too much looseness in the spending of public monies in such troubled economic times.

For the last half dozen years there have been recurrent and wholly ineffective federal-provincial talks about the problem of getting uncontrolled increases in health spending under some measure of restraint. The problem has come up repeatedly at meetings and while he was president of treasury board, C. M. Drury embarked on a mission with the prime minister's specific backing and support. He toured all the provincial capitals to talk about the problem of controlling these costs.

In his June budget, Finance Minister Turner went beyond these years of ineffective discussion and tried a new approach. He pointed out in his budget speech that last year the federal share of Medicare and hospital insurance, over which it has no control under existing legislation, rose by 20 per cent. That compares with the general inflation rate of 12 per cent in the same year.

The federal government will attempt to get Medicare costs under some control by limiting its contributions to the provinces but this will be done on a per capita basis so that any population changes will be automatically taken into account. And to give the provinces time to adjust, the control attempt will not commence until next year. In 1976-7, however, the federal government will not allow its contributions to provincial Medicare plans to grow by more than 13 per cent.

That 13 per cent, it should be remembered, is much more than twice the rate of general economic growth that any serious person can foresee for 1976. It is 50 per cent greater than the estimated rate of inflation. In fact, far from being too stringent as the provincial ministers claim, this is much too loose a control.

Rise in Prices

Someday soon the increasing costs of these programs must be brought into fairly close relationship to the general rate of economic growth in the community and the general rise in prices. When the costs of any government program are allowed to soar at rates which far exceed both price increases and economic growth, its demands on total resources soon become excessive and lop-sided.

After 1976-77 the federal ceiling will be moderately more stringent—10½ per cent the following year and after that 8½ per cent. Unless someone really believes the economy is capable of growing at a comparable rate that final figure is too high. Actually, it is almost double what it ought to be because in the next years it is not likely that the Canadian economy will grow at much more than an annual rate of 4½ per cent — if that over the coming decade.

The other federal sin in the provinces' eyes was to give the necessary five years notice that it will terminate existing arrangements under the Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act and undertake new ones. Those new ones, of course, have to be worked out with the provinces but this cannot be done without first giving the legally required notice. It is simply that action which has caused so much provincial fury.

The provincial health ministers are in urgent need of sound economic advisers.

Slow Hummingbirds

I always thought hummingbirds too alert for cats to catch, but this summer I have watched a cat that has caught three hummingbirds, to my knowledge.

I watched it catch the last one as it came to sip nectar from nasturtiums. The cat, nestled and waiting among the nasturtiums, nabbed the hummingbird, nasturtium and all, and crossed the lawn with the hummingbird in its mouth with the nasturtium flower dangling as a garnish for the cat's delicate dinner. — V.R. Cragg, 799 Byng Street.

Accommodation Crisis

I am writing because I have run out of ideas and am desperate. The fact is the landlords and caretakers in Victoria have given me a very difficult time.

It seems they will rent to anyone except single persons, students or anyone with a child. I guess I have three strikes against me for I am a single parent with a four-year-old daughter and (because I decided to go back to university to finish my degree) I am a student.

I am a quiet, clean, 30-year-old mature man with eight very good references. My little girl is very good and will be attending the university daycare centre. As you can see we should make very good tennants.

I must have contacted at least 100 apartments and rental units personally plus phoned that many again. I have personally checked most real estate companies. I have advertised in all local papers three or four times. I advertised over the radio and still I cannot locate anything which is clean, cheery and under $300 per month.

Perhaps you can tell me what I can do? Perhaps you can tell me why children don't have the same right as anybody else to have decent living surroundings like any retired person or elderly individual?

What can I do? I wouldn't worry so much if I didn't have a child to look after.

We are now stuck in a one room light housekeeping unit. This place is cold and dark. We have been invaded by huge spiders which really scare my little girl. The toilet is quite a distance from our room and the floor separating us is cold concrete. It is clean, however, and I am grateful that I have this. Unfortunately I could only rent it for one month and it is just about up.

I honestly don't think the apartment owners realize what a terrible position they are putting people like me in.

I think it is high time equality went as far as children. Why should discrimination against our children and future leaders go unnoticed?

I appeal to your readers — if perhaps you know of a suite or apartment or house (even to share) could you please contact me as soon as possible. A message can be left at 386-6998 between 5 and 8 p.m. — Patrick Rushford, 1148 Grant Street.

60 YEARS AGO

TOKYO — For the first time in the history of the Japanese empire, extending over 2,500 years, an emperor is to accede to the throne in the presence of the representatives of his people. That is one great reason why the coronation of Emperor Yoshihito, which will take place on Nov. 10, is regarded as one of the supreme events in Japanese national life, and why it is being looked forward to with such eagerness and delight by the emperor's subjects. The accession, or coronation, ceremonies will last a fortnight and will revolve chiefly about the imperial palaces in the ancient capital of Kyoto.

By ROBERT FISK

(Fisk is on the foreign staff of The Times of London. He specializes in international terrorist movements and wrote this article for the New York Times.)

Illich Remirez Sanchez, the bespectacled Venezuelan assassin sought by police in four European countries for shooting to death two detectives and an informer in a Paris flat, was given weapons training in Lebanon by the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. That is what the Popular Front asserts and there is little reason to doubt it; the dead informer was one of their men who had changed sides.

However, while Sanchez was in Lebanon, several members of the Japanese Red Army Movement, the far-left terrorist group that took over the United States Embassy in Kuala Lumpur two weeks ago, also turned up in the country for arms training. At the same time, too, the Red Army was forging links with the West German anarchist Baader-Meinhof organization which was, in turn, vainly trying to offer guns to the Basque separatist movement in Spain.

Not long afterward the Basque separatists sent a secret emissary to talk to the Irish Republican Army in Dublin. They also held discussions with the Tupamaros in Uruguay who have formed a "Junta for Revolutionary Coordination" with three other Latin-American extremist groups.

All of this looks to worried governments as though an international terrorist brotherhood is now in being. In one sense they are right; in another, they have much less to fear than might be apparent.

There is certainly a new and frighteningly efficient transfer of weapons across international frontiers. Many of the arms used in recent attacks in continental Europe — including the Arab rocket attack on a Yugoslav DC-9 airliner at Paris' Orly Airport — came from an American military depot in West Germany which was raided for weapons two years ago.

Several grenades from that very depot were found by the French police in Illich Sanchez's hideout in Paris last month. Interpol officials suspect that the Baader-Meinhof gang helped to distribute the stolen weapons around Europe and that they also had a hand in setting up a headquarters for the Japanese Red Army in Paris. Until September, 1974, the Japanese terrorists ran their European operations from a perfume shop in the city's wealthy Avenue de l'Opera.

The Baader-Meinhof gang may also have helped the Red Army undertake its most notorious operation, the massacre of 26 passengers at Lod Airport in Israel. On that occasion, three Japanese terrorists who had been trained in Japan and in Lebanon, were given false papers in Germany, Czechoslovak weapons in Rome and boarded a French airliner for Israel, an astonishing and complex instance of international terrorism.

This pattern of terrorist cooperation is not universal. In the last four years, the Irish Republican Army has acquired 50 Soviet-manufactured rocket-launchers from Libya, 175 Armalite hunting rifles from the United States, Chinese-modeled Kalashnikov rifles from Belgium and German submtchine guns from Czechoslovakia. For their part, the Basque Homeland and Liberty organization recently laid its hands on a stock of Israeli-made Uzi submachine guns.

Yet none of these shipments came from other terrorist groups. The rocket-launchers were a gift from Libya's leftwing President Muammar el Qadaffi, the Armalites came from Republican Army sympathizers in the United States and the other guns were bought on the international arms market. The Basque's submachine guns were purchased from a dealer in Hamburg, a transaction carried out so noisily that the Spanish police were able to infiltrate the arms network and almost upset the sale.

In some cases arms have been offered by one terrorist group only to be turned down by the potential recipient. There is some evidence that the provisional Irish Republican Army was prepared to give guns to the Basques. But one Basque leader in the Spanish city of Bilbao, while acknowledging that his movement could make life very rough for the police if it possessed rocket-launchers, declined, saying they would rather obtain their weapons independently.

Most terrorist movements like to boast of their international connections. The Japanese Red Army has long espoused the cause of the Palestinians, the Palestinian guerrilla armies have talked in glowing terms of the Irish Republican Army which in turn has sympathized with the Basques. The Basques spent long hours discussing political (although not military) revolution with representatives of the Tupamaros organization in Germany in 1974.

It is important for most revolutionary movements, whether they be nationalists or anarchists, to emphasize their international connections; most extremists want to give the impression that they are taking part in a world struggle because this enhances their own cause.

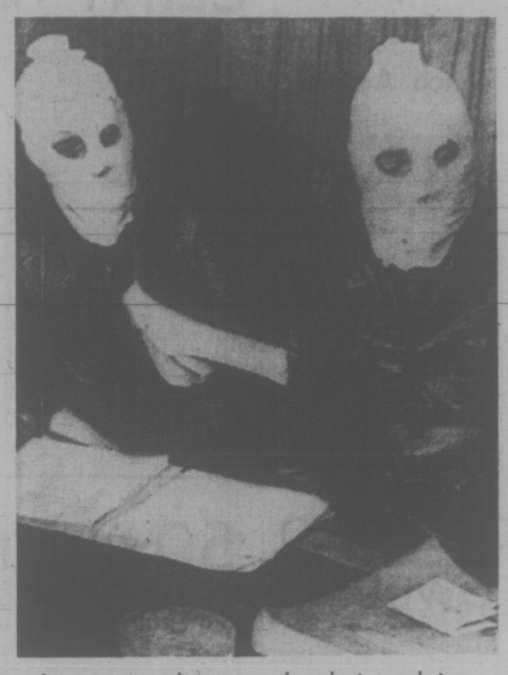
Still, few of the guerrillas in Europe and the Middle East have much in common. The Irish Republican Army; with its rightwing nationalism and the Basques with their half-nationalist, half-Marxist ideology have scarcely any ideals in common with the Japanese Red Army or the Baader-Meinhof gang who both believe that they can foment some kind of international civil war by the simple expedient of provoking violence.

It is not by chance that many of the extremist groups are riven by internal disputes.

Arab countries which might once have watched with some satisfaction the actions of Arab guerrillas in Israel have adopted a quite different approach when they have been faced with requests to receive hijacked airliners.



Internationalism may be their undoing

The terrorists who have specialized in pirating aircraft now find that Lebanon, Egypt and other Middle-Eastern nations refuse them permission to land. The Red Army men who flew out of Kuala Lumpur had to take refuge with the mercurial President Quaddafi; no one else would have them.

The Iranians have already put two Kurdish hijackers before a firing squad; several hijackers who fled to Aden are now reported to be breaking up stones for the government there.

The Arabs may even be tempted to attend an anti-hijack conference soon; Western governments have been offering them invitations for four years.

Meanwhile, the governments of Western Europe and the United States have been cooperating to an unusual degree in exchanging information about terrorism movements and methods.

British policemen now taking advice from the French on kidnappings and British soldiers in Northern Ireland are so well briefed by overseas security forces that they can receive details of bomb explosions almost anywhere in Western Europe within 24 hours. The very internationalism of terrorist movements might yet prove to be their undoing.

Size Gorging Civil Service

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — The most serious problem of government today is not the quality of political leadership or even the antiquated machinery of Parliament, but the state of the civil service. Where once the federal service was poor, proud and spirited, it is today gorged with high living, sluggish and demoralized.

What was once an elite corps attracting able men and women with a sense of public service has become an overblown army of underworked and overpaid time servers.

This is not to say there are not first rate people in the civil service. There are, and perhaps more than ever before. But they are lost in the legions, the victims of some frightful law of bureaucracy in which quantity is the enemy of quality, producing not more and better results, but more useless paper.

Even the best tend to become cynical, half ashamed of being civil servants. Many of the most talented leave in disgust, or after a brief encounter, refuse to take the permanent positions open.

The paper shufflers remain, feeding on each other's red tape, breeding new sections and sub-sections, practising their skills at office politics, clogging the administratve works.

These are harsh judgments based on personal impressions and conversations rather than on objective study and scientific conclusion.

There is no single reason for the decline of the service and no person particularly to blame.

According to one theory, the rot started with the commendable attempt in the 1960s to introduce modern management methods. The argument is that methods which work in business, where costs are a daily discipline and profits are the clear goal, simply cannot be applied to an organization in which public service is the objective. Instead of producing more efficiency they produce more managers.

And however desirable for other reasons, the bilingualism program has also created problems. It has been necessary to hire more people and to interrupt careers. Language requirements have introduced fears and suspicions.

But over all, there is the sheer growth in the size of government, creating a vast, impersonal jungle in which good men are soon lost and adventurers most likely to prosper.

Whatever the cause, the need for cure is urgent. A straight 20 per cent cut in mapower and money available to pay salaries might work. The screams of pain and protest would be terrible. Deputy ministers would threaten to quit. Administrators would say it was impossible. Civil service unions would strike.

But in the process, the unnecessary jobs would be eliminated, the essential work reorganized, the excessive salaries renegotiated. The survivors would find themselves working harder on more important tasks, giving better value for money, regaining pride.

There might be a better chance of encouraging reform and renewal from within the civil service. Bureaucrats are just as anxious as industrial workers to find satisfaction and fulfilment in their work.

Industrial democracy in which workers share in management is spreading in Europe and seems to be taking hold in North America. It might be adapted to work in the civil service, replacing the rigid hierarchy with a form of collective responsibility.

In any event, the problem of the bureaucracy is one which should be of particular concern to socialists, who have somehow to reconcile their desire for more public planning and control with the fact the civil service in its present form is already too big for its own good.

Japan: A Sense of Aloneness in the World

By MARK FRANKLAND
London Observer

TOKYO — "The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations is, in extending our commercial relations to have with them as little political connection as possible." The speaker was George Washington in his Farewell Address but if there is one country in the world where similar sentiments flourish today it is Japan.

A parallel between the young American republic and the Japanese economic superstate might seem surprising, but it exists. It helps to explain one of the most important sides of modern Japan — its aloofness from the rest of the world, its sometimes proud and sometimes uneasy sense of being different from other countries.

The new American republic was suspicious of and felt superior to the countries of the Old World, It would trade with them but wanted to avoid contamination by them. It felt it represented a new order, the best form of political society that man had yet devised.

Japan today is also wary of the outside world. It makes no claim to be a model for others to follow, but most Japanese do feel that the Japanese way of doing things is best for Japan, and they believe it to be not only different but irreconcilable with the way of the rest of the world. Undue foreign influence is feared as a sort of contamination. And behind this strong feeling of being different often hides an unspoken sense of superiority.

This is a puzzle and an irritation for many foreigners who have dealings with Japan. It is made worse by the way the country and the people seem, at first meeting, to be so thoroughly Westernized. Foreigners working or negotiating with Japanese who dress and live in Western fashion sometimes become apoplectic when they discover that the Javanese actually function in a way that is entirely unwestern. It is like opening the hood of an apparently ordinary car to find that it has an engine that operates on principles quite different from the ordinary combustion engine.

It is no mystery how this has come about. In the hundred years since Japan ended its isolation from the rest of the world it has adopted Western forms and techniques without destroying the peculiar principles of Japanese society. Japanese feudalism was replaced by capitalism, and democracy was added to that at the end of the Second World War.

But the Japanese have a capitalism that lacks the reverence for private property that is at the heart of Western capitalism. Their democracy regards majority rule as a devilish device that should, whenever possible, be avoided. (They prefer, instead, to reach decisions by consensus reached by long discussions).

The family-style group is what makes almost every Japanese institution work. Eminent academics have their families of younger scholars whom they have trained and patronized. The work-place becomes a surrogate home (which makes work less impersonal than in most other industrialized countries). Democracy is not a matter of individuals standing on their rights but of groups sticking up for their own interests and knowing that if they protest loudly enough authority will be reluctant to impose a majority solution. Thus Tokyo's new airport remains closed because of the objections of local farm and other groups, and Japan's energy program is threatened by towns refusing the construction of new power stations.

There is a constant watch for undue foreign influence. Unlike almost any other country in Asia an ambitious young Japanese will not help his career by being educated at a famous American or European university. He must first attend one of the big Japanese universities which not only brings him up in a proper Japanese way but also provides him with a group of university class-mates with whom he is expected to have a valuable association for the rest of his life.

Foreigners are kept in their place in Japan by making it almost impossible for them to acquire Japanese citizenship.

Japan, in the context of the world, is a closed society. Japanese associate their identity with their special way of doing things. If they open themselves entirely to the world they will start behaving like the rest of the world and then, they fear, they will no longer be Japanese.

Theirs is a special problem because, unlike other great countries, they do not believe that they can impose their way of doing things on others. Unlike Russia, China or America, Japan does not set itself up as a model for the rest of the world because it believes that the rest of the world, not being Japanese, cannot follow it.

And this is the significant difference between Japan and the America of George Washington. The early Americans would have liked the rest of the world to be like America, but feared it was not yet ready for it. The Japanese feel they are unique and therefore inimitable. It is a belief that causes them as much unease as satisfaction. They are rich and successful, but in the society of the world very lonely.

City Council Nastiness

harry bruce

There's nothing like flaring tempers to relieve the tedium of public life, and to remind the sweaty that, yes, even one's city fathers and city mothers have feet of clay. And tempers have flared so marvellously on Halifax City Council lately that, if councillors would only give advance notice of their outbursts of rage, tickets to their show would outsell the wrestling, the roller derby and the Neptune Theatre combined.

Tempers flared first a couple of weeks ago when Mayor Edmund Morris (a Conservative) and Alderperson Dennis Connolly (a Liberal and also an up-and-coming arch-rival of the mayor) engaged in what the press claimed reliable sources claimed was a "heated exchange."

It occured at a somewhat secret meeting at which the distinguished alderpersons were contemplating the mayor's appointment of themselves to certain commissions. Connolly was less than satisfied with the way things were turning out for him, and indeed, he had a hard word for his worship.

Heated exchanges have a habit of becoming heated messes and, pretty soon, tempers were flaring left and right in the councillors' cozy lounge at City Hall and Alderperson Brenda Shannon, acting on the principle that if you can't stand the absurdity then get out of the kitchen, removed herself to the echoing silences of the empty council chamber.

She waited there for 40 minutes and then, as Foster Hewitt used to say, cooler heads prevailed. The donnybrook was over. Tempers unflared. Exchanges became luke. The alderpersons joined her in the chamber and commenced a regular meeting of city council.

Nothing further might have come of the imbroglio — excluding a few smoldering grudges over the next two or three decades — if it had not been for Alderperson Margaret Stanbury (a Conservative), who takes her duties as deputy mayor most seriously.

Ms. Stanbury decided Connolly was a naughty, rude, little boy when he called the mayor what he called the mayor and, since she hasn't the authority to wash out his mouth with soap, she waited a week to rally some support among certain councillors and then tried to introduce a motion of censure against him.

A motion of censure seems to be a kind of collective expression of disappointment over somebody's failures of discretion and, though it probably hurts its victim somewhat less than a parking ticket, it sounds as grim as a court-martial and makes for even more excitement than arguments over where to put garbage dumps.

Ms. Stanbury was determined council should punish Connolly for his "disgraceful, demeaning and unparliamentary" remarks about His Worship but, as opposition to the idea spawned a whole new round of flaring tempers and heated exchanges, she was sufficiently charitable to promise, "We are not going to take him out in the backyard and string him up . . . it's only a motion of censure."

Connolly said that Ms. Stanbury, by publicizing an incident at a private meeting of council, had committed a breach of confidentiality, anyway, he contnued, her motion "smacks of witch-hunting."

Meanwhile, the sordid fact of the catfight over commission appointments, the leaking of the fact to the press and, now, Ms. Stanbury's further sensationalizing of the nastiness so enraged Alderperson Wilfred Moore he couldn't stop stalking about the chamber.

The city solicitor said he'd need time to prepare a ruling on whether or not council even had the right to censure anyone for behavior at unofficial meetings and Ms. Stanbury said, "I can't stand indecision, and that includes from the city solicitor on down."

This remark caused Moore, a lawyer himself, to pace furiously around the chamber even faster than before. His Worship called for order and, finally, issued a dreadful threat. He might have to "name" Moore. (In parliamentary language, "naming" someone is formally declaring him or her guilty of disorderly conduct.)

Another week passed. The city solicitor ruled that, yes, council had indeed had the right to pass a motion of censure against Connolly and that Ms. Stanbury had failed to put it "properly before the committee."

And Dennis Connolly — saved by a technicality from a fate worse than having to stand in the corner and repeat one hundred times, "I will not call the mayor bad names" — could relax once more, his criminal record still clean.

But what had he called His Worship on that fateful midsummer night so long ago? A cad? A bounder? No one dared say out loud. By dint of dogged investigative reporting, and in-camera interviews with usually reliable sources, I believe I've learned the historic epithet.

I can tell you this: It's a four-letter word to define one who makes a false statement with the intention to deceive, and it rhymes with "mire".

Some Haunting, Forceful Piano Images

By HOI-YIN DER
Times Staff

British pianist Clive Lythgoe's performance of "Sonata in One Movement" was the climax of the two and a half hour concert presented Saturday night by the faculty of the Shawnigan Summer School of Music at St. Michael's University School.

Lythgoe captured the emotional intensity of this profound piece, written by American composer C. T. Griffes shortly before his death. The opening motif, on which the entire piece is built, appeared through Lythgoe's interpretation as a kind of force undergoing the inner turmoils of life as it developed through the three sections of the one-movement sonata. And yet it was haunting, particularly in the blurred imagery of passages where Debussy's influence on Griffes appeared in the toil.

Vancouver mezzo-soprano Phyllis Mailing carried the audience of over 200 into the sorrows of a lover yearning for his love and homeland in her rendition of Schumann's Liederkreis, Op. 24. On score, Schumann's music and Heinrich Heine's poetry are only notes and words; Mailing gave them life, capturing the moods, the disappointments, grief, bitterness and yearnings of an unfulfilled love.

Robert Aitken, co-principal flautist with the Toronto Symphony for the past five years, received thunderous applause for his performance of Schubert's Introduction and variations of the theme 'Ihn Blumleinalle,' Op. 160. The fluidity in the running passages, clarity of the upper notes well supported by the lower register and articulation added up to a flawless performance. The interpretation caught all moods of the piece, the delicacy, tranquility, vigor and excitement. Pianist Ian Brown, member of the Orion Piano Trio, gave Aitken excellent support and displayed his talents as one of the finest accompanists and pianists about.

A rather unique combination of instruments and voice were brought together in the performance of Frank Martin's 'Quatre Sonnets.' Robert Aitken (flute), Douglas Perry (viola) and Sharon McKinley (cello) gave good support for mezzo-soprano Rita Noel. This transparent work was sensitively performed and each instrument was well-balanced with the others.

Noel also displayed her talents on the viola with her performance of Milhoud's Quatre Visages — La Californienne, the Wisconsonian, La Bruxelloise and La Parisienne.

Firefighters In Surrey Reach Accord

SURREY (CP) — A tentative contract agreement has been reached between Surrey and its 70 firefighters.

A spokesman for the workers said Monday both sides will meet Thursday with mediator Clive Gilmoure.

The spokesman said the workers, who will vote on the package next Tuesday, achieved most of their objectives — parity with Vancouver firefighters who received a 17.1-per-cent increase in a one-year contract.

The Surrey proposal is a two-year contract. Base rates were unavailable.

CLINT WANTS YOUR CALL . . . PREPAID!

Clint Shaw of Victoria has completed the first major hurdle in his drive to break the 40-year-old world record for continuous rolltr skating — 147 hours.

But to help him through the rest of his quest, he'd still like Victorians to telephone him as he circles the roller skating rink at Reseda, Calif., near Los Angeles.

Since he started Saturday morning, his Victoria phone calls have come from personal friends and the press, he said in a telephone interview Monday.

Anyone who wants to phone should call (area code) 213-345-6905 and they will be connected with his cordless phone. He is particularly looking for an encouraging call in the early morning hours. But all calls must be pre-paid or they won't go through.

Shaw skated the first 48 hours without a break. The longest continuous skate he had made before was four hours.

After two days going around the rink, he slept for four hours.

Now he is working on the second 48 hours which he should complete at noon Wednesday.

He plans to finish the remaining hours to break the record in easier steps, likely ending Friday, his 34th birthday.

"The big thing now is to finish this 48 hours at Wednesday noon," he said.

"If I can do that, I think I can break the record."

Shaw said he felt "great" after finishing the first 48 hours but the inside of both legs was "really aching."

Rivets in his right skate came through and he slackened the skate but he has a small blister under one toe and another under his heel.

"Other than that my legs are in great shape," he said.

The roller rink is open to regular skaters during the day and evening and he said they give him a lot of encouragement.

"But in the early hours there is hardly anyone," he said.

Under the rules of the marathon, he gets a five-minute break for each hour he skates. But he is converving these to take four-hour sleeps at the end of 48 hours.

The record he is trying to break was set by Walter Miller of Portland, Ore, in 1935 when he skated 147 hours — six days and three hours — at the White City Rink in Boise, Idaho.

ONE GOOD FOWL DEED

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 90,000 surplus British Columbia egg-laying fowl will be canned to be sent to starving persons in India, Bangladesh and Haiti, Ron Allen, director of the Food for the Hungry relief agency said Monday.

The birds, which are past their egg-laying prime, are being donated by egg farmers. The surplus is the result of a low market value for the fowl and a lack of slaughterhouse facilities.

Allen said the meat will be distributed as part of the agency's food-for-work program in which recipients receive it as payment for work on development projects. Allen estimated the cost at $1.25 a bird.

50 Years of Oil at Most

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's oil reserves will last 30 to 50 years if used to meet widespread current energy needs, the Pacific Science Congress was told Monday.

A. J. Mooradian of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. also told the meeting of scientists from Pacific Rim countries that oil production in Canada is expected to peak in 15 to 20 years.

Mooradian said it will be difficult to establish full and universal alternative energy sources and the process of securing fossil fuels will be costly in the future.

He said nuclear generation of electricity, in theory, could provide current North American energy-consumption standard for 10 billion people for thousands of years, however, he added that it would be some time before engineering and design problems related to nuclear power plants are overcome.

Mooradian said the uranium supply industry should be stimulated and the development of an optional nuclear system called the thorium fuel cycle should be promoted.

Another speaker, Ernest Robertson of the Biomass Energy Institute said the energy obtainable from natural processes of growth and decay is sufficient to "ensure enough renewable (energy) basis for perpetuity" if managed properly.

Letter Union President's Last Term

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Citing the performance of the national executive, Roger Decarie said Monday he will not seek a fourth term as president of the Letter Ca.riers Union of Canada.

He also cited attempts by Quebec members to split the union and too much politicking at the lower levels as reasons he is not seeking the leadership which he has held since 1966.

He urged delegates attending the union's national convention to "make a clean sweep of their officers."

Decarie also said the union has been weakened by business agents whose first concern is to be re-elected. He also attaeked union negotiators and officers, charging that in the last round of bargaining with the government, they "negotiated what I consider a poor agreement . . . except for the employer."

HOW LESLIE ALMOST BECAME A FIREPERSON

CALGARY (CP) — A female psychology graduate had a crack at the all-male preserve of firefighting during the weekend when a bureaucratic blunder placed her application for a position with the city's personnel department with applications for 70 new jobs with the fire department.

"I was fed up with looking for jobs in my field," said Leslie Musselwhite, 22, a University of Calgary graduate. "This looked interesting and worth a try."

After applying for the personnel position, she said she received a letter from the city saying her application as a firefighter had been accepted.

"There was no mistake they knew my sex — the letter was addressed to Miss Musselwhite," she said.

When the error became apparent to city staff, they refiled the application and tried to talk her out of going through with the screening process, which involved a series of written, physical and stress tests. But Miss Musselwhite was not dissuaded.

"My family thought it would be a great idea," she said.

However, Miss Musselwhite, who took the test along with 20 males, failed the physical requirement to haul a pulley up a three-storey building three times.

Firefighters recommended a year of workouts and a second try, saying "she's got nerve, guts and stamina."

Miss Musselwhite, scheduled to begin a job in September as a receptionist, said the city "will undoubtedly process the application again, and this time for the personnel department.

Kidnap Hearing Slated

CALGARY (CP) — A preliminary hearing on kidnapping, bank robbery and other charges against Guy Smith, 29, of St. Jerome, Que., was set in provincial court Monday for Sept. 3.

The preliminary hearing was earlier scheduled for Sept. 5 but it was advanced two days Monday.

Smith was charged in the quarter-million-dollar extortion-style bank robbery July 4. Police are looking for two other suspects.

Three men, about 30 years of age and with French accents, broke into the home of Ken Tunnicliffe, manager of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce branch at foothills hospital, on the night of July 3 and held him and his wife hostage.

Police said the next morning, one of the men accompanied Tunnicliffe to his bank, where a ransom of $245,050 was paid. Mrs. Tunnicliffe, taken away by the other two men, was released after the ransom was paid.

Following his initial court appearance on the bank robbery and kidnapping charges, police laid 10 additional charges, including the robbery of a drive-in movie theatre of $5,000 in May, against Smith.

Officer in Shooting Quits

CALGARY (CP) — A police constable who opened fire at a moving vehicle with four juveniles inside has resigned from the force, deputy police chief Howard Leary said Monday.

The constable, a four-year veteran with the force, had been subjected to an internal police investigation and resigned Monday.

Deputy Chief Leary said the department was to bring an internal charge, likely of disobeying a standing order not to shoot at a moving vehicle, when the resignation was handed in.

One of the juveniles was hit by a ricocheting bullet. The youth received minor back injuries, was treated in hospital and released.

The deputy chief said the internal investigation established that the shooting was unnecessary. However, no criminal charges could be pressed against the constable, whose name was not released.

Police said the incident occured in southwest Calgary early Thursday morning. A police patrol car with two officers iaside tried to stop a vehicle, reported stolen during a break-in, for investigation.

The car sped away and a high-speed chase followed. The patrol car later overtook the vehicle to intercept it and the two cars collided.

As the officers left the patrol car to get to the juveniles, the car sped away again. It was at this time one of the constables fired three shots at it.

Manpower Moves For Immigrant

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada Manpower is working to assist a Polish man living in Austria who has been offered a job in Edmonton, Garth Norris, information officer for the city's Manpower office, said Monday.

Kazu Sweich, who escaped to Vienna with his family from behind the Iron Curtain about a month ago, has been offered a job with Manpower Temporary Services in Edmonton. The job could not be filled by a Canadian.

Manager of the private employment agency, Peter Yuca, said Saturday Sweich is getting a "bureaucratic runaround" from the Canadian embassy in Austria although the embassy knows a suitable job has been arranged for him.

Norris said Sweich applied for immigration status on July 16, and was refused unless he could supply a job offer. The job offer was received in Vienna on Aug. 8 and proceedings were initiated.

Sweich was advised a three-month wait would be required in Austria before his application could be processed, Norris said.

"An important point is that he is not claiming refugee status. He is seeking entry as a landed immigrant," Norris said.

Under immigrant status, a certain number of points are needed, whereas a refugee has a number of these things waived.

Yuca said Saturday Sweich's money is running out and his family is getting desperate financially. He also said the man can't remain in Austria because an agreement was signed last spring between Austria and Poland specifying that Polish refugees may not work in Austria while they await immigration processing.

Norris disagreed, saying Sweich's financial difficulties are apparently self-imposed because Austrian social agencies are available to help refugees.

Norris said the man could work in Austria, where several Poles are working while papers are being processed.

"Our office in Vienna is going to bring him in for an interview and the question of support will be discussed," he said.

Last Chance For Indian Fish Co-Op

FORT McMURRAY, Alta. (CP) — The financially-troubled fishing co-operative at Fort Chipewyan, Alta., has until Friday to bail itself out, minister without portfolio Bob Bogle, said Monday.

Bogle, minister responsible for native affairs, said that members of the co-operative "just aren't coming out to fish."

Terming it a "last chance to save the co-op," he said members had to "either fish or we'll close it down."

The co-operative has been a money-losing proposition since its inception in 1966.

The situation has become an embarrassment to Fort Chipewyan and to all native co-operatives, Bogle said.

A final decision on whether or not to close the co-op will be made Friday, the minister said.

"We don't want to write it off, but (at the present time) it doesn't look good."

Food, Fuel Prices Major U.S. Threat

By HOBART ROWEN
WASHINGTON (WP)

Food and fuel once again pose a serious threat to price stability, but the United States is not yet facing the onset of another round of "double-digit" inflation.

That was the consensus of Food Administration officials and private economists, Democrats as well as Republicans, studying the unexpected bulge in the July consumer price index.

But they also agreed, in the light of uncertainties about fuel and food prospects, with the comment of AFL-CIO President George Meany, who said that "consumers are in for more bad news" over the next several months.

The biggest thrust behind the sizable jump in the July CPI — 15.4 per cent at an annual compounded rate — was energy. This group of prices, including gasoline, motor oil, coal and fuel oil, rose at a rate of 31.7 per cent according to a special Bureau of Labor Statistics compilation.

Food rose at an annual rate of 22.4 per cent, the second month in a row of a steep rise.

The view that "we're in for several months of bad news on the price front" was expressed by former Economic Council Chairman Walter W. Heller and others. But Heller said that the weak state of economic recovery around the world would hold most commodity prices down, making a double-digit pattern unlikely.

"But what I think is very ominous for the long run," Heller said in an interview, "is the way that steel, aluminum, auto, and paper companies are pursuing a pricing policy that doesn't conform with a free enterprise concept. They are acting like they can repeal the law of supply and demand."

His reference was to major price increase announcements in the face of weak demand. For example, steel companies have scheduled a price boost averaging nearly 4 per cent for Oct. 1, although sales have fallen off sharply and are at the lowest level in at least two years.

Some analysts — including those who favor and oppose wage-price intervention — suggested that one immediate result of resurgent inflationary pressures would bring more talk about controls, or at least renewed "jawboning."

"Jawboning" is a pressure tactic applied by high officials to companies or unions, in an effort to persuade them to modify their demands through exhortation or public criticism.

Ford Administration officials admitted that the July index number was well over what had been expected, and that uncertainties over grain and meat prices, and what would happen when oil prices are decontrolled September 1, suggest unpleasant CPI numbers in the months ahead.

Secretary of Labor John T. Dunlop said in a telephone interview that "what happens over the next six months" would be crucial to the price outlook. He doubted that wage settlements would be pushed much higher than the present 8 to 10 per cent range — despite the fact that many labor contracts are tied to the CPI — unless the poor price performance of July is repeated for a longer period.

Dunlop stressed that the underlying or "bedrock" rate of inflation since the first of the year excluding food and energy, "is not all that bad."

He cited 2nd quarter CPI figures covering all non-food, non-energy items, which showed only a 4 to 5 per cent annual increase. However, the non-food, non-energy increase for July came to an 11 per cent rate, which a BLS spokesman said is "uncomfortably high — we hope it's temporary."

Pacific Western

Pacific Western Airlines reports net earnings of $919,135 or 34 cents a share for the first six months of 1975, compared with net earnings of $996,120 or 38 cents a share for the corresponding period a year ago.

The airline, which is 90 per cent owned by the government of Alberta, grossed $50.4 million, an increase of $9.3 million compared with gross revenue for the first six months last year. Because of Alberta ownership, PWA is treated as a Crown corporation and exempt from paying income tax.

During the first six months of 1974, the airline — privately-owned at the time — set aside more than $1 million to meet future income tax payments. This exceeds the net return in the first half of this year.

Bell Canada

Bell Canada has announced consolidated earnings of $1.50 a common share for the three months ended June 30, compared with $1.54 for the corresponding period in 1974. Consolidated revenues during the second quarter of 1975, including operating revenues and sales by manufacturing and distributing companies, were $781.4 million compared with $644.4 million over the corresponding period last year.

PLO Will Be Invited To Vancouver Session

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada assured the United Nations Monday it stands by its commitment to hold the Habitat conference in Vancouver next summer and that the basis for participation by delegates will be governed by rules that normally apply to UN conferences.

That means that the Palestine Liberation Organization, which has observer status at the UN, will be able to attend.

There had been some question whether Canada would try to bar the PLO from admittance.

Canadian delegate James MacNeil disclosed before the 56-nation Habitat preparatory committee that Exterfal Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen had provided basic assurances in a telegram last week to conference secretary-general Enrique Penalosa of Colombia.

MacNeill's statement appeared to be designed to reassure Arab and Third World delegates who had been expected to challenge Canada's position as conference host in the light of the controversy over admission of PLO delegates to the UN crime conference that was to have opened in Toronto next week. It was switched to Geneva.

MacNeill, deputy minister of urban affairs said he is pleased to say that Prime Minister Trudeau had made clear that Canada's commitment to host the Habitat conference has not changed.

He said MacEachen had given the same assurance to the conference secretary-general in response to questions that had been raised by other delegations.

The PLO was granted observer status by the UN General Assembly last fall and as such has the right to participate in UN conferences.

Cowichan Rec Centre Gets Grant

DUNCAN — A $33,333 grant covering one-third the capital cost of a new community recreation centre for Cowichan Valley Regional District was approved in principle by the provincial government Monday.

Advance commitment by the government was given so the region can begin negotiations to buy the Christian Science hall in Duncan and renovate it.

Transport Minister Bob Strachan said a further one-third of the $100,000 cost would be supplied by the health department, leaving local taxpayers to pay $33,333 themselves.

TV News Violence Backed

Times News Services

KINGSTON, Ont. — Spokesmen for the three Canadian television networks have defended their use of violent scenes in TV news as a proper responsibility of news reporting.

They spoke Monday at a seminar sponsored by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission at Queen's University, where the subject of violence in TV news, documentaries, drama and other programs is being discussed with government officials and university research workers in the social sciences.

Conrad Winn, professor of political science at Carleton University, Ottawa, said confilict should be shown in newscasts only when it is pertinent to the news story.

Staged depiction of violence should be banned and telecasters should reduce the number of stories they try to present in each newscast.

The way TV news is presented, leaves one to conclude that the world is "chaotic and unfathomable," he said.

William Cunningham, vice-president of Global Television, was astounded at Prof. Winn's comments. He said anyone using staged film would be fired from any reputable news department, and that to not cover violent events would itself be a distortion of the news.

Knowlton Nash, in charge of information programming for CBC television, noted that after TV reported that dogs were set on demonstrators at Selma, Ala., 10 years ago, there was such an outrage that dogs have not been used on people since.

Murray Chercover, president of CTV said that when a number of radio stations in the U.S. tried to present nothing but good news, listeners tuned to other stations.

The audience wants to know what really is going on in the world.

Tom Gould, vice-president of CTV, said he felt outrage at the approach of the academic members of the seminar who want to soft-pedal violence. To present a world of non-violent sweetness would be a disservice to society. Society has to be given an opportunity to correct its ills.

Judy LaMarsh, former federal cabinet minister now heading an Ontario royal commission investigation of violence in the mass information media, said one of the problems is the pervasive impact of radio and TV.

She said she was impressed by a suggestion of David Helwig, literary manager for CBC drama, that television service be reduced to three or four hours a day so that people are not encouraged to watch it mindlessly.

"I find it upsetting that that much stimulation is beamed in for that many hours . . . to that many homes," Helwig said, adding that television is designed to be habit-forming, "an anesthetic."

Vote Race Begins In Newfoundland

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The campaign for a Newfoundland provincial general election got off to a formal start Monday as Premier Frank Moores announced voters will go to the polls on Sept. 16.

The premier's announcement of the election, the third in less than four years, ended months of speculation that began last March when the government brought down Newfoundland's first $1-billion budget.

A principal issue appeared to be the government's handling of Newfoundland's economy.

Mr. Moores said his Progressive Conservative government had made large strides since the March 24, 1972, election in implementing policies that would share the province's wealth among all its citizens.

But former premier Joseph R. Smallwood, leader of the Liberal Reform party founded in July held a different view.

"Now the people are going to have a chance to pronounce their opinion on the mismanagement of Newfoundland by Mr. Moores," the 74-year-old Mr. Smallwood said in an interview.

Liberal Leader Ed Roberts had no immediate comment.

There also was no comment from the New Democratic Party, which also is expected to contest the election.

The NDP has never elected a candidate in Newfoundland.

Murders Drug War Offshoot

MONTREAL (CP) — Police say a war between two main groups fighting for control of the illicit drug traffic is responsible for at least half the 76 slayings in the Montreal Urban Community (MUC) so far this year.

MUC Police Det.-Insp. Jean Claude Rondou, head of the 14-member homicide squad, says one of the groups involved is thought to be a motorcycle gang and the other is a group related to a French-Canadian organized crime family.

Insp. Rondou said half the homicides this year are a result of underworld "squaring of accounts," revenge and vendettas, mostly related to drug traffic.

The 76 slayings to date represent a near doubling of the 1974 homicide rate. There were 66 slayings in the city during all of last year.

Lt.-Det. Emile Boire of the Criminal Investigation Bureau, believes one reason for the increase is because witnesses to the homicides are killed along with intended victims.

Arabs Reject UN Dismissal Of Israel

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — A majority of Arab nations attending a conference of nonaligned countries has decided to reject militant calls for the outright expulsion of Israel from the United Nations.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmud Riad said Monday the Arab nations have decided to ask the United Nations to "Consider expulsion" of Israel but not actually implement it.

Arab militants, including Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization, had proposed resolutions calling for Israel's outright expulsion from the world organization.

The five-day conference of foreign ministers from 78 nations today began working sessions devoted mainly to global economic reform.

WORKMAN DIES

A 56-year-old workman collapsed and died shortly after 1 p.m. Monday as he and another man worked on a roof of a new washroom at Pemberton Park in Fairfield.

First reports indicated Albert Hunter Slater, 3411 Maplewood, may have been electrocuted.

However, Victoria police said a physician passing by stopped to assist and said Slater died of a heart attack.

Policemen Pay For Safety Gift

One child will go back to school this year with a shiny and safe new bicycle — the prize in a three-day safety display starting Thursday.

Members of the Victoria police traffic division taking part in the Capital Region Safety Council event raised money among themselves to buy the $50 Road King bike which has a light, safety flag, generator and red reflectors.

Tickets for the bike are free to all 5-to-10-year-olds attending the safety display in the Hillside Mall.

Films and booklets on traffic safety will be supplemented by fire, police and other officials available to answer questions.

One target of safety information will be children going to school for the first time who may not know traffic dangers, said police.

Another target will be drivers who have become careless over the summer when school children were not on the road.

Man Refused Bail In Murder Trial Case

NANAIMO — A 25-year-old Ladysmith man charged with two counts of attempted murder stemming from an incident in Ladysmith Aug. 17 was refused bail in provincial court here Monday.

Provincial court judge Donald Ward said William Rosebleff's detention was necessary for the protection and safety of the public.

Rosebleff, was charged after Bradley Lockhart, 23, and Robert Lamontagne, 24, both of Ladysmith were shot during a fight on the town's main street.

Lockhart still remains in Nanaimo hospital recovering from gunshot wounds to his stomach; Lamontagne was released after treatment for a minor wound to his side.

Ward imposed a ban on publication of the proceedings in the hour-long bail hearing.

More than 30 people, mostly native Indians, crowded into the courtroom to observe the proceedings. Three RCMP officers searched the observers prior to their entering.

Police said they seized two knives. No other weapons were found.

The winner was Casimir Kruszka, 32, a laborer from Balsdell, New York. PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — William Plachta was charged with manslaughter Monday because he allegedly stood by while his terminally ill wife committed suicide, doing nothing to stop her. Francesca Plachta, 49, who was dying of a degenerative disease of the nervous system, was found dead in her bed Sunday of an overdose of sleeping pills. She left several suicide notes, including thanks to her doctor for prescribing the lethal pills and a message of "goodby to a rotten world," police said. Plachta, 64, waited in another room while she took the overdose, investigators said, and then checked on her several times until he was certain she was dead before pulling a sheet over her face and calling police. "I guess he faced the problem of her impending death for a long time," a police officer said. Plachta was released on $2,500 bail.

MISSOULA, Mont. — Hank Williams Jr., seriouly injured early this month in a fall from a mountain, is out of the hospital. Williams, 26, was injured Aug. 9 when he slipped on a snow field at the crest of the Continental Divide near Ajax Lake, about 50 miles southwest of Butte.

An Eye for $3,000

Estep

JACKSON, Mich. — A prisoner who has been behind bars for most of the past 20 years wants to sell one of his eyes for $3,000 so he will have enough money to go straight when he gets out on parole.

Jim Estep, a 40-year-old convict at Southern Michigan prison, says his asking price would be just enough for a down payment on a gasoline station or hamburger stand.

"It would be nice to walk out of here with a few bucks in my pocket," says Estep, who is soon to be paroled in November.

"Somewhere there's a guy who needs a cornea transplant," he said. "He and I should get together and scratch one another's back."

Estep has served time in Illinois and in county jails around the country, mostly for auto theft. Currently he is serving six-to-10 years for larceny from a person and for escaping from the prison in 1968.

He says he likely will be forced to live in an Alcoholics Anonymous settlement house unless he can come up with the $3,000.

"I got a drinking problem."

Orr's Offer Biggest Yet

TORONTO (CP)— Bobby Orr has about a month to decide whether to accept a contract offer his agent described Monday as "the largest ever offered a professional athlete."

Neither the agent, Alan Eagleson, nor president Wayne Belisle of Minnesota Fighting Saints spelled out details of the contract offered the Boston Bruins defenceman at a meeting here Monday.

But Eagleson said the contract offered his client by the World Hockey Association club topped the pact given Pele to sign with New York Cosmos of the North American Soccer League. Pele received a reported $4.5-million.

The agent said the Bruins have been given until the start of the 1975-76 season to come up with a counter offer, but Orr would like to decide on his future before training camp begins next month.

But Eagleson said the Saints' offer would be impossible for the Bruins to match.

"Boston can't come close to the offer in dollars."

Belisle called the agreement "the best package ever offered an athlete" and said Orr would be looked after for life "as well as his children and his children's children."

Even if Orr signs with the Saints, Boston managing director Harry Sinden says the Bruins will hold him to the final year of his $225,000-a-year contract with the Bruins.

"We want Bobby Orr to play every single game, he can as a Boston Bruin," Sinden said of reports he would be released from his contract if he signed with the WHA team.

Eagleson said his client is prepared to honor his obligations to the Bruins even if he signs with the Saints.

The Saints' offer is expected to be discussed at a meeting of WHA trustees here today. There have been reports the other teams in the league will be asked to contribute to a bonus being offered Orr.

Although Winnipeg Jets acquired Bobby Hull under similar arrangement, there have been reports that several teams have balked.

Calgary Cowboys, Quebec Nordiques, Indianapolis Racers, Edmonton Oilers and New England Whalers have all been mentioned in one or more report as being unwilling to contribute.

Bud Poile, director of operations for the WHA, said today's meeting was called three weeks ago and while the offer to Orr had not been on the original agenda it would certainly be discussed.

Before Monday's meeting, Quebec Le Soleil reported that Orr would be offered a package worth $7.5 million, including a $1.5-million signing bonus and $600,000 a year.

Boxers Canada's Best —Time for New Accord

A week planned on the water . . . foiled. Or the moral of today's message. Don't take a vacation on the sunshine coast in the rainy season. That was last week. Of course, that was unless you included Texada Island in the itinerary. That's right, because the only place the sun shone (naturally) was at Blubber Bay. The water at Gillies Bay was as warm as ever and the campers who were clamming at Shelter Point were enjoying the usual excellent results. But then, what else is new? The roads, that's what; and now the big problem on the Island is progress. The Islanders aren't all that happy over the fact the provincial governmtnt is spending $500,000 on a road-improvement program. They really don't want all that attention or the influx of tourists they're liable to get next year either.

Oh, well. Otherwise the fishing is just fair at Gold River, but expected to improve, and at Campbell River the story is to get outside, the farther the better, which means a bigger boat than the norm. A fair coho season is anticipated.

Now back to stark reality. One of the ugly ducklings of B.C. soccer has put the B.C. Soccer Commission in its place and certainly made local history as well.

The London Boxing Club is to be congratulated for winning the Canadian soccer championship on the weekend and in fairly handy fashion. Not bad for a club which wasn't considered good enough to play in the B.C. Premier Soccer League, wot? You recall that story? No? Well that's easy.

A year ago, the B.C. Soccer Commission in its wisdom decided that regionalization was the answer to soccer's woes and ordered two Victoria teams, Gorge Molson and Boxing Club out of the Premier League which includes the top mainland clubs and into an Island league.

The local clubs protested this would do nothing for the image of soccer and wouldn't help the teams either as they wouldn't get the competition necessary to produce a contender for provincial and national honors. But they were over-ruled and so the Island League was their home last season.

But the Boxers obviously had a bit more pride than people generally gave them credit for and, in the ensuing schedule and playoff action, proved superior to all others in the province. Then on the weekend they achieved the ultimate — the Canadian championship, the more commendable because of the shoddy treatment earlier.

Where that leaves them for next season remains to be seen, and probably to be negotiated, but it is hoped that some amicable solution can be reached without the rancor and dispute that surrounded events of last year. As champions, the Boxers certainly deserve to be recognized and, if earlier there were faults on both sides, even during the provincial playdowns, perhaps now is the time for a truce, especially in the interests of the game.

Hey! And wouldn't that be something, just as the presence of a Canadian championship unit in our midst is something to be proud of. Especially as this is a first ever! So well done is the word.

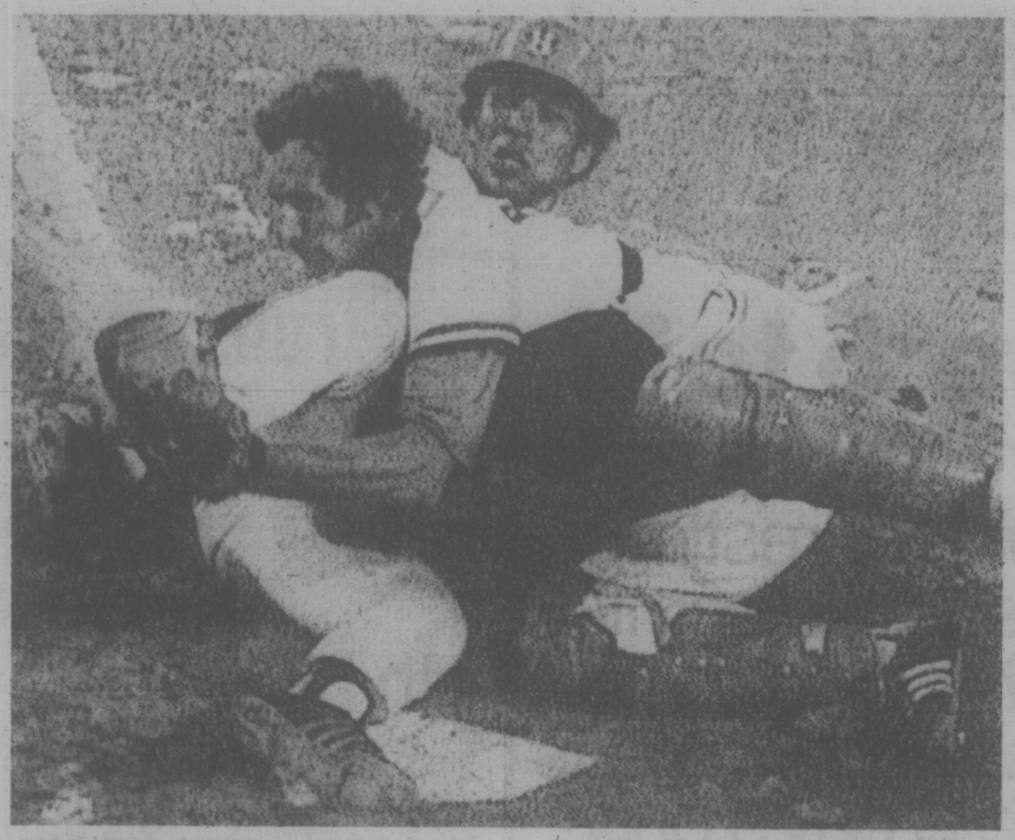
Meanwhile, back in Oshawa, those two words, confusion and controversy, have popped up again. Victoria Bate had two players declared ineligible on the eve of the Canadian men's fastball championships and, as a result had to fly in two pitchers, Pat Coffey and Larry Cole, to plug the gap created by the loss of Andy Konopacki and Jim McMillan. Konopacki and McMillan were recruited from the Pacific Coast Fastball League, but as Coffey and Cole had appeared with Bate in the B.C. final, it was declared they were the only replacements who would be recognized. Konopacki and McMillan couldn't play.

From this distance, the ruling appears fair enough, but why it wasn't made before Bate left for the championships is hard to imagine and rather inane at best. Obviously somebody goofed because the matter of any eligibility should have been determined before the players left town. So let the blame fall where it may. Otherwise, Bate appears to have a poor draw and the worst of the schedule. But that's understandable. Oshawa is the host team and Kitchener is the Ontario provincial champion; and when you are going for fan appeal in a tournament, naturally you go with your own and at the preferred times. And if it happens to work out that an otherwise contending team is stuck with an apparent bad break in the schedule — too bad!

What did Bate expect in Ontario anyway? Favors? Which is another reason why it should be such a great week.



TANGLED UP AT HOME are St. Louis Cardinals' catcher Ken Rudolph and Jose Cruz of Houston Astros. Cruz was tagged out on play when he tried to score from third in sixth inning of National League baseball game Monday night in St. Louis. Rain forced an end to the game with Houston leading 4-3 in the 11th inning and the contest will be replayed tonight. (AP Wirephoto)

The Rains Save St. Louis

By The Associated Press

The rains came just in time Monday night to save St. Louis Cardinals, but manager Red Schoendienst wasn't doing any celebrating.

There were two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning and Houston Astros were leading 4-3 when the skies opened over Busch Stadium.

After 134 minutes of trying to get that last batter to the plate, National League umpire Ed Sudol made the rain-out official, leaving St. Louis 3½ games behind the East Division-leading Pitttsburgh Pirates.

"What do you want me to do, turn cartwheels?" said Schoendienst.

The St. Louis contest enters the season records as a 3-3, 10-inning tie, and will be replayed from the start as part of a doubleheader tonight although all performances in the 10 innings Monday will go into the books.

In Monday's other National League games, Pittsburgh blanked Atlanta Braves 4-0, Philadelphia Phillies trimmed Los Angeles Dodgers 4-2, Cincinnati Reds whipped Chicago Cubs 11-4, and New York Mets stopped San Diego Padres 4-0.

In Monday's American League games, Cleveland Indians beat Chicago White Sox 5-1, Texas Rangers blanked Detroit Tigers 1-0 and Minnesota Twins topped Milwaukee Brewers 6-3.

The rain wiped out an 11th-inning homer by Houston catcher Cliff Johnson that would have put in the record books as the sixth player in major league history to hit six homers in six games. Dale Long holds the National League record of eight homers in eight games.

"I've never seen this happen in the 35 years I've been in baseball—a rainout with only one out to go," said Sudol. "We gave it every possible chance.

The Cardinals blew a 2-1 lead and had to fight back for the 3-3 deadlock with a run in the 10th. They had a runner at first when the downpour struck.

Jim Rooker limited the Braves to three hits and Willie Stargell hit a pair of run-scoring singles for the Pirates.

Cincinnati shortstop Darrell Chaney had 17 relatives on hand to see him hit a three-run homer at Chicago's Wrigley field.

"I saw them all jumping around after I came around third base," said the native of nearby Hammond, Ind.

Mike Schmidt hit his 31st home run and Greg Luzinski drove in his 102nd and 103rd runs of the year to carry Philadelphia past Los Angeles.

Schmidt's home run came in the second inning off Andy Messersmith, 14-13, and tied him with Luzinski for the major league lead.

JOURNEY WILL BE GREAT IN '78 FOR OARSMEN AT WORLD MEET

NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) — Rowing officials Monday approved plans for a once-in-a-lifetime trip for the world's amateur oarsmen.

The International Rowing Federation FISA awarded the 1978 world championships to Lake Karapiro on the North Island of New Zealand.

Tom Keller, Swiss president of FISA, said: "We will try to arrange an international meet in Australia before the championships, and another in the United States afterwards, so that competitors will go around the world.

"I want every oarsman and oarswoman of international class to have one round-the-world trip they will never forget."

The championships are held every year. Next year they will be merged with the Olympics at Montreal, and Amsterdam had already been chosen as the site for 1977.

FISA was meeting during a break in the current world championships.

Victoria Pair Trails

VANCOUVER — Hopes of Victoria's Tom McKeachie and Chuck Davies for the pairs title at the Canadian lawn bowling championships took a beating Monday.

The Victoria pair lost on the final end against both Nova Scotia and Saskatchewan and downed Manitoba 25-15 for their only win of the day.

That left them with a record of two wins and two losses, tied with Quebec in the eight-team, round-robin tournament.

However, with three rounds left today they can still catch the leaders. Ontario is first with a 4-0 record, Alberta and Saskatchewan next with two wins, two losses and one tie each.

Nova Scotia and Ontario lead the four with 4-0 records while Bruce Matheson of Vancouver, George Boxwell of Ontario and Hal Clayton of Saskatchewan have 4-0 marks in singles competition.

In women's play, Dorothy Foreman of Vancouver leads the singles with a 3-0 record. Ontario teams are the only unbeaten ones after three matches in triples and fours and Ontario and Manitoba are tied for first place in pairs with 3-0 records.

Evert's Victory Worth $14,000

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Chris Evert overwhelmed Virginia Wade 6-0, 6-1 under overcast skies Monday at the Westchester Country Club in the rain-delayed final of a $75,000 women's tennis tournament.

Miss Evert, 20, collected $14,000 for the victory and justified her No. 1 seeding for the U.S. Open championships which begin Wednesday at Forest Hills.

Miss Wade, Britain's top woman player for the past several years, won $7,000. She is seeded second at Forest Hills.

Miss Evert, playing on the clay-court surface that makes her baseline game near unbeatable, was in command from the outset and so dominated the match that only two games went as far as deuce. She committed only seven unforced errors, an unusually low number, in winning her 75th straight match on clay.

Victoria Pair Captures Title

WEST VANCOUVER — Scott Braley and Russ Hartley of Victoria captured the under-18 boys' doubles title at the B.C. junior closed tennis championships held here recently by defeating the Vancouver pair of Henning Sorenson and Chris Young-Lai 6-2, 4-6, 6-2.

Hartley, who also received the sportsmanship award in the tourney, bowed 6-2, 6-4 to Ashif Giwa in the under-18 singles final.

Harness Drivers To Face Charges

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Two harness drivers at Pocono Downs racetrack have been suspended from racing and arraigned on criminal charges of rigging a Big Triple race on Aug. 5, the state Harness Racing Commission has announced.

Involved are Edward Williams, 29, of Buffalo, N.Y., who drove the winner Aug. 5, and Adrian Bowling, 36, of Morrisville, Pa., who drove the sixth-place finisher.

Longacres Stewards Probe Use of Drugs

RENTON, Wash. (AP) — Reserpin, a strong tranquilizer, has been found in the blood and urine of four horses scratched from a Longacres exacta race last week, the Washington State Horseracing Commission says.

As the investigation into the administering of the illegal drugs continued Monday, Terrance J. Christman, 25, of Kent was suspended for the remainder of the racing year by the board of stewards.

A post-race test on the horse Christman trains, Judge's Doc, which came in second in the exacta race, showed a drug called pantazocine in the horse's system. Lauck's Testing Laboratories, Inc. which did the tests, says that the drug is a strong pain killer.

The four other horses scratched by the commission veterinarian because they looked ill were Swappin Jass, Johnny Bud, Bull Ring King and Trespasser.

CAMPBELL VOWS TO FIGHT MOVE

BOSTON (AP) — The Herald American says National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell has vowed his league will fight any switch of Boston Bruin defenceman Bobby Orr to the World Hockey Association.

Campbell told the newspaper the NHL has looked into the possibility of backing Orr's salary but not at the multi-million dollar level the WHA is reported to be offering.

"We haven't, for practical purposes, gone deeply into the matter yet," Campbell was quoted as saying from his Montreal office. "But we have explored the legality of this in relation to anti-trust legislation, and our reports were favorable."

Campbell cautioned he was not interfering with negotiations under way beween Orr and the Bruins. Orr's present five-year contract expires next June.

Campbell said player salaries as high as $10 million were unrealistic in the financial structure of hockey.

"I read $700-a-day forever," Campbell said. "That's crazy. Projected over a 200-day period, that's $140,000-$150,000 a year. But over 365 days and into perpetuity, that's unrealistic."

New Protest Fails to Stop Bates' Charge

OSHAWA — Victoria Bates' coach Joe Patterson might be excused if he occasionally bites his nails or gnashes his teeth today.

Angered by the draw for the Canadian senior "A" men's softball campionships, Patterson has had worse luck with two protests upheld against his team.

The first was Saturday night when the Canadian Amateur Softball Association ruled that the only players Bates could pick up were the two they had picked up for tht B.C. tournament — Stuffy McGinnis pitchers Pat Cofty and Larry Cole.

The second was Monday afternoon in a game against Nova Scotia when a player change by Patterson was ruled illegal.

Despite having to play the inning over again, Bates took a 2-1 decision for their third win in as many outings. Earlier in the day they trimmed Newfoundland 9-4.

That left Bates in the lead in the seven-team Red Division with a 3-0 record. They play Northwest Territories today and wrap up their round-robin play Thursday with a match against Oshawa Tony's.

Oshawa remained the only other unbeaten team in the Red Division Monday. The defending champions shut out Northwest Territories 3-0 with Paul Wannamaker pitching a perfect game.

The only other unbeaten clubs in the tournament are Ontario and Alberta, first and second respectively, in the Blue Division. Ontario has three wins and Alberta two.

Bates, 6-0 winners over Saskatchewan in their opening game, had their toughest competition against Nova Scotia.

The Victoria club took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Bob Burrows singled, advanced to second on a sacrifice fly by Bob Holness and scored on a single by Pete Songhurst.

Stan Kern, who earned the win against Saskatchewan, kept Nova Scotia off the scoreboard until the seventh inning.

That was when Patterson's change caused the protest by Nova Scotia, which tied the game when the inning was replayed.

Patterson's move was protested when he put Mike Taaffee into left field in place of Reg Underwood and moved Underwood to right field in place of Harvey Stevenson.

The Nova Scotia coach protested that Taaffe wasn't on the lineup card and he was upheld. In making up the lineup card, Patterson had written third baseman Wayne Forland's name twice and excluded Taaffe's.

However, Bates didn't take long to score the winning run. In the bottom of the seventh, Taaffe's replacement Randy Benn singled, advanced to third on a single by Burrows and scored on another single by Holness.

World Must See Games, Says Killanin

ALGIERS (AP) — The 1976 Olympics must be televised throughout the world, the president of the International Olympic Committee said Monday.

Lord Killanin, addressing a news conference in Algiers, said the IOC has stressed this point with the organizing committee of the Montreal Olympics. He said he was confident an agreement would be reached by the beginning of September.

"There are too many persons on vacation now and that is what is holding up the announcement of an agreement," Killanin said. "We are quite certain the Games will be televised and we are working on this."

PICKING A ROUTE for title success is team that travelled farthest to get to Canadian junior men's golf tournament. Burden Carries Burden As Stamps Bid for Lead

TORONTO (CP) — Willie Burden is on a hot streak.

The Calgary Stampeders running back has strung together four 100-yard-plus rushing games — a feat that has him at the top of the Western Football Conference rushing leaders.

Burden started the season with a 70-yard game against Saskatchewan, and has subsequently rushed for 159 and 182 yards against B.C. Lions, 130 against Winnipeg and 103 against Ottawa.

Canadian Football League statistics released Monday show that in five games, Burden has carried 105 times for a net yardage of 644-an average of 6.1 yards per carry. George Reed, the veteran Saskatchewan running back, follows Burden with a 4.6 average on 121 carries for 560 yards.

In the scoring race, place kickers continue to lead in both the Eastern and Western conferences.

Dave Cutler of Edmonton has nine converts, 11 field goals and three singles for 45 points to lead the Western Conference. Saskatchewan receiver Tom Campana follows with five touchdowns for 30 points. Cyril McFall of Calgary is tied with Campana with six field goals, 10 converts and two singles.

In the Eastern Conference, Zenon Andrusyshyn of Toronto Argonauts holds a 10-point lead over another place kicker, Gerry Organ of Ottawa.

Andrusyshyn has 16 field goals, four converts and two singles for 54 points while Organ has 10 field goals, 12 converts and two singles for 44.

Peter Dalla Riva of Montreal Alouettes is third with 40 points on six touchdowns and two, two-point conversions.

Running back Doyle Orange of the Argonauts is the leading rusher in the Eastern Conference, carrying 78 times for 408 yards—an average of 5.2 yards per carry, and two touchdowns.

Meanwhile in Winnipeg tonight, Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Calgary Stampeders will be looking for a share of first place in the Western Football Conference and both will be counting heavily on the power running of their fullbacks.

But before the Bombers can gain that first-place tie with Saskatchewan or break the second-place deadlock with Calgary and Edmonton Eskimos, they'll have to find a way to stop Burden.

Only One Home-Course Bid For National Junior Crown

ernie fedoruk

Home course has its advantages, but don't expect the Gorge Vale Golf Club to produce the 1975 Canadian junior men's champion.

The odds are against it.

The Gorge always has been a prime developer of golf talent, but the host club for this year's national tournament has only one threat. He is Darrell Fink, an 18-year-old who plays to an eight handicap.

The 179 other entrants, therefore, will march on "neutral" territory when the big show gets under way Wednesday.

The single entry dismays Leo Derman, Gorge Vale's secretary and the area's unofficial golf historian.

"There was a day," said Derman, "when Gorge Vale would have supplied half of the entries from Victoria. But times change, I guess."

In all, 16 players from five clubs will be representing Victoria. Uplands leads the way with seven hopefuls — Russ Reynolds, Rob Lee, Charles Fisher, Steve Leung, Wayne Little and brothers Brad and Art MacLeod.

Cedar Hill has five entries, including Victoria champion Jim Rutledge. The others are Gary Doherty, Bill Coupar, Jim and Mike Cook.

Kevin Baggott and Ted Boomer, both of Colwood, and Victoria's Brian McKay complete the district lineup.

One of Gorge Vale's most illustrious graduates is Cowichan professional Bill Wakeham. A two-time winner of the B.C. Open, Wakeham, while playing out of Uplands, was the one and only player to bring the national junior title to Victoria.

That was 18 years ago.

Noel Pumfrey came close when, playing out of Gorge Vale, he reached final in 1963 but lost, one up, to Vancouver's Wayne Vollmer at Colwood.

Originally a 36-hole medal event, the tournament changed to a match-play format in 1959 but reverted to medal play a few years ago.

The eyes this week will focus on rising stars, and most feel Jim Harrison of Islington, Ont., last year's winner, has to be the man to beat.

Others feel a pair of 18-year-olds — Sandy Harper of Nanaimo and Jim Goddard of Vancouver — are good bets to bring the title back to B.C.

The prime hometown threats are Rutledge and Reynolds, constant playing pals. Only 16 but Victoria's champion for the past two years, Rutledge has the finesse game to score well at Gorge Vale.

All the district and Island players have concentrated on "learning" the course during the past several weeks. Course knowledge will be a factor because, says head professional Earl Davies, "distances are deceiving. You're always hitting into greens surrounded by trees."

Recent rains have added a great lushness to the course, and the course is expected to play longer than the designated 6,530 yards (232 longer than normally played).

Par is usually 37-35—72. The official rating is 71.5 and the tournament committee decided to make par 71 by changing the 448-yard 11th from a par five to a four.

Expressing "due respect to the talent on hand," Davies feels a total of 287, three over par for the four rounds, "may be good enough to win it."

It runs in the family . . .

"My three sons have each had a newspaper route and it has been, and is, a rewarding part of their younger years of life."

Capitals Reach Heywood Final

Ray Beverage made sure he won a tight pitching duel with Don Clark and paced Capital Builders to a 1-0 victory over London Boxing Club to win the best-of-five Heywood Men's Softball League semi-final 3-1 Monday at Heywood Avenue Park.

Beverage, who struck out eight batters, allowed no bases on balls and scattered five hits, also connected for a home run to supply the only scoring in the game.

Clark struck out nine, gave up no bases on balls and allowed five hits in a losing cause.

Capital will face the winner the Eagles-Tony's Holdings series, which continued tonight at 6:30, in a best-of-five final.

In the Stuffy McGinnis League, all went for nothing Monday night.

The game will be replayed tonight with Ingraham holding a 1-0 advantage in the series.

At Macdonald Park, Century Inn and Oak Bay Plumbing advanced to the playoff final of the Commercial Men's League.

Oak Bay nudged London Boxing Club 4-3 to take their best-of-three series 2-1 after losing the completion of a suspended game 10-9 in eight innings. The game had been carried over from the previous week with the score tied 8-8.

Len Stewart tagged a bases-loaded single to spark the seventh-inning Oak Bay rally which wiped out a 3-1 Boxer lead in the second game.

Century advanced by downing James Bay Athletic Club 2-1 in the deciding game.

The best-of-three final opens Wednesday at Macdonald Park.

Movers Take Title In Overtime Battle

Terry Armstrong made the most of his chance to pitch for Greaves Movers Monday at Lambrick Park.

A player in the Senior Babe Ruth League ranks most of the season, Armstrong scattered eight hits to lead Greaves Movers to a 7-2 triumph over Gorge Hotel.

The win gave Greaves the Amateur Baseball League best-of-five Victoria Senior final 3-2.

Armstrong and Gorge pitcher Mob Mabee were locked in a 2-2 deadlock after the regulation seven innings but the Movers broke loose for five runs in the top of the eighth inning for the victory.

Phil Pimlott and Roy Moretti opened the inning with singles and Mabee then loaded the bases with a walk. A wild pitch by Mabee scored two runs and a throwing error by catcher Russ Holmes allowed another run to score. Walt Burrows finished the rally with a two-run single.

Canada Shares Second After Defeat by U.S.

MONTREAL (CP) — Steve Lane, a 19-year-old from Lexington, Ky., came within an out of pitching a no-hitter Monday night as the United States blanked Canada 6-0 to clinch first place in Group B of the Intercontinental Cup baseball tournament.

Lane, a quick-throwing lefthander, pitcher 8 2-3 hitless innings before Brent Hallet nicked him for an infield hit in the bottom of the ninth.

Lane allowed at least one base runner in every inning except the seventh but got help from three double plays. He faced 37 batters, 10 more than the minimum.

The U.S. grabbed three unearned runs in the first as Bert Newman scored on a ground ball and Jerry Mondalto slammed a two-out, two-run double.

A run-scoring single in the second by Glenn Gulliver chased Canadian starter and loser Greg Lindsey, and the U.S. nicked reliever Brad McArthur for a run in the third.

McArthur left with one out and two on in the ninth and Bob Thomerson gave up a run-scoring hit by Molitor.

The win gave the U.S. a 5-0 won-lost record and put them six points ahead of Nicaragua and Italy in Group B of the eight-country, round-robin competition. Canada dropped to 3-2 and is tied with Puerto Rico for second in Group A behind Japan's 4-0 mark.

National Basketball Team in Fine Form

PRAGUE (CP) — The Canadian national women's team under the direction of head coach Brian Heaney of Halifax is performing at a pace unequalled in the country's basketball history.

The record of nine wins and three losses is the finest ever for the women's team. The seven straight victories that the team compiled during the last two weeks is also a record unattained ever before.

The team finished the Golden Diana tournament in Yambol, Bulgaria, with a 3-2 record. It then won two games in Yugoslavia over the national team and continued in Budapest to churn out wins over Korea 68-48, Yugoslavia 68-55 and Hungary 56-55 before being stopped in a gold medal bid in the Bavarian Cup final by Poland, 87-85.

Heaney said on the team's arrival in Prague Monday, on its way to Kosice, Czechoslovakia: "What these players have been able to accomplish with only three weeks of preparation in Canada is almost inconceivable.

"The country should be proud of their achievements and realize that this team's destiny as a medal winner in the Olympics is an attainable goal," Heaney said.

"We will improve over time and many of the players have already expressed the feeling that this is the finest team they've ever played for. The enthusiasm is rampant and the players finally realize that they will be a great team."

Outstanding performances have been turned in over the 12-game span by Carol Turney of Chilliwack, B.C. and Liz Silcott of Montreal, averaging 15 and 14 points a game respectively.

The rebounding department was dominated by Sheila Strike of West Vancouver, B.C., and Sylvia Sweeney of Montreal.

The team will train in Kosice, Czechoslovakia, for two weeks, and then compete in the Czech national tournament, Sept. 1-6, against Czechoslovakia, France, Bulgaria, Italy and Hungary.

FALL TENNIS CLASSES FOR ADULT STUDENTS

When the youngsters go back to school, adults get more time on the tennis courts.

They'll also have their own variety of schooling, with Saanich, Victoria and Esquimalt again sponsoring a fall series of tennis classes for adults.

Starting Sept. 6 and continuing until the end of October, the program will be directed by Gordon Hartley and four assistants.

Divided into two courses — one for beginners and one for more experienced players — the instructional series will be conducted at Lambrick Park and the new Oaklands courts on Kings Road.

Players may register for the course on Sept. 3 at Gordon Head Recreation Centre, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., 2 to 4 p.m. or 7 to 9 p.m. The registration fee is $15. Tennis balls will be supplied.

Players may register for the course on Sept. 3 at Gordon Head Recreation Centre, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., 2 to 4 p.m. or 7 to 9 p.m. The registration fee is $15. Tennis balls will be supplied.

Taiwan Tops Japan On Ump's Decision

TAIPEI (AP) — The chief umpire awarded Taiwain a victory over Japan for a rules violation in the last inning Sunday, giving Taiwan its seventh consecutive Far East Little League baseball championship.

Japan had tied the score 7-7 with one run in the top of the sixth inning of the final game of the championship. Taiwan was batting in the bottom of the sixth with runners on first and second and nobody out.

Chief-umpire Joe Guerrero ruled that a time out called by Japanese coach Jujio Inoki to advise pitcher Junichi Abe was Japan's fourth time-out, and under Little League rules the pitcher must then be changed. He gave Onoki two minutes to change pitchers and then declared the game a 6-0 victory for Taiwan, which was unbeaten in the tournament.

Onoki argued that it was only the third time-out.

Last year, Taiwan went on from beating Japan, 14-1, in the Far East tournament and won the Little League World Series at Williamsport, Pa., for the fifth time in six years.

This year, however, foreign teams were barred from the Williamsport tournament.

Belfast Club to Play Four Games on Island

Vancouver Island rugby teams will have new opportunities next month to test their skill and strength against Irish talent.

First of those opportunities comes on Sept. 3 at Royal Athletic Park when the Stranmillis College Scholars of Belfast open a four-game series on the Island with a match against James Bay Athletic Association.

Stranmillis defeated James Bay 19-3 during a 1969 visit but may find the Victorians somewhat stronger this time. James Bay won the provincial championship last season and has all its key players back for another campaign, including Canadian team members Stu Barber, Hans de Goede and Mick Eckhardt.

Following the clash with James Bay, the Belfast boys will invade Duncan for a Sept. 6 contest against Cowichan, return to Victoria for a Sept. 10 game against University of Victoria Vikings at Athletic Park and conclude the Island tour with a Sept. 14 match against Castaways at a Victoria site that has yet to be decided.

Prior to the Island series, the Stranmillis club will play two games on the mainland against Vancouver sides.

Wendy Wins

Singles champion in the 16-and-under division at the Canadian closed junior tournament here last week, Miss Barlow downed Debbie Harit of Montreal 6-3, 6-3 in a first-round singles match in the same class.

Two other Victoria players did not fare so well in the same division. Nina Bland lost 6-4, 6-4 to Beth Ruman of Munster, Ind., and Jennifer Bland was beaten 6-0, 6-3 by Toronto's Claire Lardner.

Vilas, Borg Advance

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Top-seeded Guillermo Vilas, the 1974 Grand Prix winner from Argentina, and defending champion Bjorn Borg, Sweden's 19-year-old star, advanced Monday to the final of the $100,000 U.S. pro tennis championships.

Vila sdefeated Wimbledon champion Arthur Ashe 4-6, 6-3, 6-0, 6-4 in the afternoon match of the rain-delayed semi-finals, while Borg downed eighth-seeded John Alexander of Australia 6-3, 6-7, 6-3, 6-0 under the lights.

Vilas and Borg, who is seeded second in defence of his title, will meet tonight in the 48th annual championship for the $16,000 first prize on Longwood's clay centre court.

West Ham Takes Lead By Blanking Tottenham

LONDON (Reuter) — West Ham United took over the leadership of the English Football League's first Division, defeating fellow Londoners Tottenham Hotspur, 1-0, Monday night.

The win gave them seven points from four matches, one ahead of Manchester United, which has played one less match.

Keith Robson scored West Ham's winning goal seconds before halftime.

The narrow margin of victory did not reflect their dominance in the match. In the second half only the skill of Tottenham Hotspur goalkeeper Pat Jennings and fine defence by Keith Osgood kept West Ham from increasing the score.

MacGowan Joins Canadian Squad

TORONTO (CP) — Marg MacGowan of Guelph, Ont., has replaced Yvonne Saunders of Toronto as a 400-metre runner on Canada's proposed Pan-American games track and field team.

Miss Saunders was included in error on a tem list drawn up Sunday by the Canadian Track and Field Association after its national championships in Sudbury, Ont.

However, Miss MacGowan had assured herselff of a berth in the 400 metres by winning the event at Sudbury. Joyce Yakubowich of Victoria is the other 400-metre runner. Miss Saunders remains on the team as an 800-metre runner.

Sue's Selection a 'First'

OLYMPIC TEAM BERTH

MONTREAL (CP) — Susan Nattrass of Edmonton will be Canada's first woman trapshooter to compete in the Olympics when she represents this country at the 1976 Games.

The 24-year-old teacher qualified for the Canadian team Sunday by breaking 267 of a possible 300 birds in the second half of the Olympic trials at the nearby L'Acadie Shooting Club, site of the Games' shooting events.

Nattrass finished the trials only 29 points behind John Primrose, also of Edmonton, and the pair will make up Canada's team next year. Out of a total 600 targets Primrose finished with a score of 565, while Nattrass broke 536 birds.

The first half of the trials to select the two top international trapshooters to represent Canada at the Olympics was held last June with 300 targets shot over a three-day period.

Primrose is a veteran of international competition. He has represented Canada twice in Olympic events, in 1968 in Mexico and 1972 at Munich. He placed eighth in 1968 and sixth in 1972.

He won a gold medal for Canada at last year's Commonwealth Games in New Zealand.

TOWN TALK

Most people who have the misfortune to drive through downtown streets on a regular basis are developing an attitude of mute acceptance to hideous traffic congestion. And no one, apparently, is more resigned than your average city policeman.

This exchange was heard over the police net on wet and miserable Friday afternoon:

Voice 1: "There's a terrific snarl-up here on Government Street. It's taking 10 minutes to travel a couple of blocks."

Voice 2: "That's pretty good these days. Situation normal, eh?"

Calgary dog owners whose pets soil the sidewalks are required under a new city bylaw to clean up the mess, and Town Talk happens to believe this is one idea we in Victoria should copy.

The penalty for not looking where you're walking on downtown streets is to land in deep trouble, and a stroll in the parks can be an even more unpleasant experience.

But the owners of these dogs doing their thing escape Scot-free. (More often than not, the offending animal is a poodle or other small "fashionable" pooch).

So come on, city fathers, get tough with the pavement polluters. Maybe the pet stores will do brisk business flogging dinky shovels embossed with doggy names?

. . . stripped

A little of the Bobby Riggs chauvinism may have rubbed off on Attorney-General Alex Macdonald while they were bouncing tennis balls back and forth on the Empress Hotel lawn a while back.

And the naked evidence lies in recent comments by the attorney-general on the topic of nudity.

"Nudity, as such in seclusion, where it is not offending anyone will not be consklered an offence," Macdonald is quoted as saying.

"But if a bunch of naked hippies descends on a family group on a beach and are offensive to people, that's different," he said.

Town-talk doesn't intend to get into a thebretical argument about which segment of society is more likely to "descend on a family group on a beach" in this state of undress.

But what about the Jaycees, the Bar Association or even the Boy Scouts?

Especially in light of the fact that one of the most venerable of tennis players has been known to lose his kilt over a tennis match.

Car commuters who drive down Douglas each morning shouldn't blame City Hall because they're missing their usual time check.

The clock above the Bank of Nova Scotia building at Douglas and Hillside came down some days ago, along with the big Scotia Bank sign.

Most people assumed it was done to comply with the city's new sign bylaw, but deputy city engineer Bill Jorgensen says that's not so. Only the sign itself had to come down.

There's nothing wrong with rooftop clocks and temperature gauges so long as they don't carry advertising slogans, according to Jorgensen.

Last Wednesday the Times ran front page pictures of something which looked like a flying saucer in the night sky over Victoria last May. Now two experts have come up with identical explanations for that top-like image — and one more flying saucer gets shot down.

Industrial photographer Robert d'Estrube says the image is a common phenomenon, sometimes called a flare, which appears in photos where there is a high light contrast and is the result of a complicated light reaction within the planes of a camera lens.

A member of UVic's physics department agrees, calling it a crustic curve, and saying the flying saucer shape is typical of the light spot which appears in such photos.

What happens the first day in months a person rides to work in a car, after cycling or walking all summer?

Yes, you guessed. A close-shave fender-smasher at Bay and Cook gave Times staffer Norman Gidney a bump on the head Tuesday morning.

A passenger in a neighbor's new car, he planned to walk to work but got a lift at the last minute.

A wonderful morale booster for someone who's had a driver's licence — but no car yet — for just three months.

Ten-year-old Leonard Bland of 5989 West Saanich Road goes into Grade 6 this September with a real summer tale to tell.

As a guest of his uncle Jim Connor, a former Victorian, he viewed the July 15 Apollo-Soyuz space launch at Cape Canaveral.

"I'll probably have to do a write-up on it," he told Town Talk. Most exciting was the ground shaking and the booster rocket breaking away and disintegrating in a ball of flame, he said.

Pictures?

"We had a camera but it was broken."

More than 80,000 entries were submitted in a post office-sponsored competition for drawings on the theme, What Christmas Means to Me.

The other five designs chosen are by Debbie Lovely, 12, of Perth, N.B.; Robert Kowalski, 11, of Toronto; Bill Cawsey, 11, of Regina; Lorraine Caldwell, seven, of Scarborough, Ont. and Danielle Hebert, 12, of Coaticook, Que.

One of the wierder press releases to cross the Town Talk desk last week was from John and Yael Beck of Judacullah, North Carolina, announcing they were setting off Sunday on foot and horseback to follow the 1,200-mile "trail-of-tears," the route of the 1838 Cherokee Indian migration from North Carolina to Oklahoma.

With them is their seven-month son Aur Jehovah, "naturally born amongst family, naturally fed, vegetarian mother and diet," and eight-year-old stallion Prince Hussein who "has travelled over 1,000 miles on foot and 4,000 miles by van, featured at presentations of "crystalina," a symbolic fairy tale, to mayors of various (American) Bicentennial communities throughout the U.S."

They are members of the International Aborigine Alliance Movement. Their trek, in memory of the forced march in which 4,000 Cherokees died, is to "put focus on the hypocrisy of the American Bicentennial."

Town Talk was invited to the Becks' press conference Sunday at high noon at Jukakullah Rock, Cullowhee, North Carolina, prior to their departure.

We didn't make it.

Cool McCharacter

Whatever happened to the summer of '75?

When a laddie has to haul his turtleneck out of mothballs before the end of August, when all the girls have deserted the beach, when the grass is soaking and your paws get muddy and it's not your fault you're leaving a few tracks on the kitchen floor, well, it's just a dog's life.

Jock, the Scotty, says all that and more, just with his eyes.

Art Research Gets $33,513

The Canada Council explorations competition has awarded $33,513 to Victoria groups and individuals for research into the arts.

A series of visual arts workshops will be sponsored for both artists and the public by Artsource with a $10,000 grant, the largest of seven grants to local groups.

Other successful bids for council funding are:

—$5,600 to Colin V. A. Browne, of Saaniehton, to research and compile a catalogue of B.C. films made prior to 1939;

—$3,576 to Dorothy I Kennedy, of Victoria, to examine and photograph collections of B.C. Salish Indian artifacts held in institutions outside the province;

—$1,694 to Charles M. Lillard, Sooke, to compile an annotated bibliography of B.C. literature published since 1900;

—$2,870 to Thomas Owen Moore, Saturna Island, to analyse and document results of experiments with people in the design and construction of their own living spaces;

—$4,773 to Alexandra Sager, of Victoria, to write the story of Frank E. Fredette, a Canadian boat designer born here in 1894.

—$5,000 to the Victoria Youth Society, for the services of a co-ordinator.

Militia Offices Moving

The headquarters of Militia Area Pacific, which is responsible for the activities of more than 1,500 reservists in British Columbia, moves from Victoria to Vancouver next Tuesday.

Brig.-Gen. D. J. Anderson, commander of Militia Area Pacific, said today the headquarters will be in the South Jericho military complex.

The staff will consist of 25 reservists, 20 regular force personnel and seven civilians.

The move, which takes the headquarters back to Vancouver after five years of operation in Victoria, will absorb the former Vancouver militia district headquarters (formerly responsible for reserve units in the lower mainland region) into the new structure.

Col. L. W. Basham, a regular force officer who has been the director of infantry at defence headquarters in Ottawa becomes the chief of staff at the new headquarters.

OAK BAY MINI-BUS?

Oak Bay should consider the feasibility of establishing a mini-bus service running north and south, Ald. John Goult told council Monday night.

This would cost less than providing parking facilities at such crowded shopping areas as Estevan and Oak Bay Village, he said.

Other aldermen indicated they liked the idea. But before the idea is explored by a committee, it was agreed to get a legal opinion first to see if council has the power to get into the bus business.

Saanich to Vote Nov. 15 On $4M Works Program

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Saanich taxpayers will vote on a $4 million works referendum at the municipal election on Nov. 15.

Items to be included in the referendum were detailed at a special in-camera meeting of council Monday.

Mayor Ed Lum said today the original cost of work to be done had been $9 million but the $4 million figure was reached by paring everything but essential items.

To avoid what happened on Nov. 17, 1973, when the ratepayers rejected a $4,115,000 referendum, Lum said the referendum will be in five sections with taxpayers voting separately on each.

The first item on the referendum will be $2,650,000 for roadwork, whittled down from the original $8 million proposed by the engineering department.

Lum said only main arterial roads will be done, concentrating on the bus routes. Roads will be widened from the present 26 feet to 42 feet and completed with curbs and gutters.

Lum said before deciding which roads will be done the engineering department will make sure that underground services are completed to avoid duplication of work.

Residents will be asked to vote on $750,000 for an ice rink.

Original cost was estimated to be $1.2 million but Lum said a change of construction, which would still produce an esthetically pleasing building, is responsible for the saving.

"It will be most likely in the Gordon Head area, adjacent to the swimming pool," Lum said, adding that Saanich intended to concentrate its recreational facilities at the Cedar Hill Community Centre, the G. R. Pearkes Arena and Lambrick park.

Another item in the referendum will be $165,000 for an addition to the senior citizens' centre at Hampton Park. Lum said the addition will provide a much-needed meeting room.

"We have about 800 members now who are crowded into a room about 60 feet by 80 feet," he said.

Another $165,000 is planned to be spent on an auditorium for the Spectrum community school on Burnside. The defeated 1973 referendum had included both an auditorium and a swimming pool.

The final item is $270,000 for work in municipal parks.

Lum said, originally, the figure had been $800,000.

"This will be for the upgrading of seven playing fields and also includes a lawn bowling building and indoor carpet bowling at Lambrick Park," Lum said.

Also in the parks section are funds for providing change rooms at Lambrick and Cedar Hill, illumination of tennis courts at Lambrick, construction of two new courts at Hampton Park and illumination of the new courts.

Group Seeks $22M For Co-Op Housing

An urgent appeal for $22 million in supplementary funds for co-op housing in B.C. has been launched by the United Housing Foundation.

Directed at Prime Minister Trudeau, the foundation is seeking money to build 601 townhouses — 89 of them in Victoria — and the remainder in Vancouver.

Projects affected here are the James Bay Co-Operative Housing Association which has been working two years on its plans to build 26 units at a cost of $850,000 and the Dome Co-Operative Housing Association on Toronto Street which requires $1.4 million to build 47 units.

Both these projects are ready to proceed.

The third is the Springridge Co-Op which hopes to build 16 units but this is a member involvement group using recycled building materials and its funding needs are less than the other two.

The brief states the CMHC co-op budget for B.C. was at best inadequate. Prior to the budget the foundation estimated its needs for 1975 at $30 million. The amount provided, "a mere $10 million," was equal to the previous year.

The foundation claims CMHC "consistently returns funds to the treasury and this was the case in 1974 when $150 million was returned unused."

"The co-operatives in B.C. can guarantee that if an additional $22 million is made available before the end of 1975, it can and will be used quickly."

The brief adds: "Rejecting mortgage commitments to co-operatives who have already submitted mortgage applications as happened to Adanac Co-op on the mainland or delaying those submitted before the end of 1975 must be considered intolerable. It will delay construction starts with consequent increase in costs due to a changed construction climate and to inflationary factors.

"Co-operatives will be faced with the stark reality of starting construction in 1976 to have it plagued by the termination of major construction trade union and industry contracts throughout the year."

There are an estimated 1,800 on the co-op waiting list.

Rushford and daughter Jackie

Three Strikes and He's Out

By HOI-YIN DER
Times Staff

Twenty-nine-year-old Pat Rushford has three strikes against him in trying to find a place to live in Victoria.

He is divorced, has a four-year-old daughter and is enrolled as a student at the University of Victoria.

Rushford said these were the reasons local homefinding consultants told him they had to decline his enlistment fee. They said they would never be able to find him a place.

In a search that began in April, Rushford has run into "a hundred dead-ends" in trying to find adequate quarters for himself and his daughter Jackie.

His plight is one of the more severe cases among hundreds that are and will be emerging in the next two weeks at UVic's Housing Service offices.

UVic's enrolment will again climb and again there is a shortage of accommodation throughout Greater Victoria. Housing offers will be accepted at 477-0176, 477-0177.

Rushford was a child care worker with the Department of Human Resources in Kelowna until he decided this year to upgrade his education with UVic's Child Care program. He came to Victoria in April for three days to search for a place.

He found one, but it fell through after he returned to Kelowna.

On July 29, he moved here with Jackie to continue his search for an apartment. For the first few days, father and daughter bunked down in sleeping bags at the home of Rev. Bob McLaren of Cadboro Bay United Church. They then found a one-room basement suite in central Victoria. Rushford said the landlord, who does not want to rent to someone with a child, took pity and has allowed them to stay until the end of August.

"I just don't know what to do after that," said Rushford, adding that he has made dozens of phone calls, knocked on hundreds of doors and put ads on all the local radio stations and in newspapers.

He began classes Aug. 18 and has placed Jackie in the UVic Child Care Centre while he attends classes. During the evenings and on weekends, he and Jackie prowl the city apartment hunting.

"But what worries me most is that I may lose custody of Jackie if I don't find a place for us to stay," he said.

"I've had Jackie for the past two years — we've grown very close to each other and it would be very hard on her if she had to leave me now."

Rushford said rather than facing the possibility of losing the child by not finding an apartment, he would quit university and return to Kelowna.

Anyone who has or knows of accommodations for Jackie and her father can call 386-6998.

WCB Urges More Safety on the Job

Well-used, unsafe electrical cords

Painted ladders hide cracks, splits

The Workers' Compensation board is hung-up on dangerous working conditions.

Correction of 44,417 unsafe working conditions were ordered by the board's accident prevention department during 1974 to save the province's workforce from needless mishaps.

But in numerous cases, safety in work can be as easy to ensure as making sure office pathways are not obstructed by electrical cords.

Unsafe ladders can also subject the worker to injury pitfalls and all electrical appliances, tools and equipment should be checked and maintained regularly — for safety's sake.

According to year-end figures, the board reports fewer industrial deaths in the province last year — 180 compared to 191 in the previous year.

The board processed 24,668 inspection reports and a total of 228 accident investigations were undertaken during that year.

The number of employers registered with the board grew to 55,176 that year with an assessable payroll of $6.4 billion and one of the major concerns are back injuries which accounted for 20 per cent of the compensable work injuries affecting 11,000 workers.

Back strains and sprains can happen to people in a variety of occupations and can be prevented by following basic techniques for keeping the back straight and using legs for lifting.

The board asks that workers get hung up — not on electrical cords or unsafe ladders — but, on safety.

High-Rise Dwellers Normal, Study Shows

OTTAWA (CP) — People who live in high-rise buildings are as mentally stable — or unstable — as neighbors in single-family homes, concludes a Toronto research study.

"We have found no evidence for the supposition that high-rise living is any worse living in a single-family house for the mental or the physical health of these urban Canadians," says the study, prepared for the urban affairs department.

A study of East York residents in metropolitan Toronto found some differences in the way people live in apartment buildings and in single-family homes, but these differences were due more to income, education and social position.

The report was written by Toronto researchers Barry Wellman of the University of Toronto and Marilyn Whitaker of Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

The authors drew on the results of a 1968 survey of 845 East York residents and later findings in a study of Thorncliffe Park, a planned high-rise community of about 30 buildings overlooking Toronto's Don Valley.

Some writers claim that "high-rise apartment living is conducive to feelings of alienation, loneliness, aggression, disassociation and loss of masculinity," the report says.

But there had been very little research in depth on the link between health and life in tall buildings.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband is an executive with a large insurance company. My problem is my husband's boss. He's not an alcoholic, but when he drinks too much (which is every time we entertain him in our home), he loses control of his kidneys, and I can't tell you what he has done to our furniture! (I had to re-cover a satin brocaded chair because the cleaners couldn't get the stain out.)

Another time the boss had one of those "accidents," my husband let him wear his best bathrobe for the rest of the evening. The boss wore it home, and I never saw it again. It happens to be the robe I gave my husband last year for Christmas, and I want him to get it back, but he doesn't have the nerve to ask for it because he doesn't want to embarrass his boss.

What do you suggest?—NAMELESS

DEAR NAMELESS: Since your husband is in the insurance business, perhaps you are covered for such damages and losses. (Have you flood insurance?) In any case, if your husband lacks the courage to ask for the robe, write off the loss. And the next time you entertain the boss, make it a beach party.

Kidney Control Eludes the Boss

DEAR ABBY: In reference to the husband who was being driven up a wall because his wife used "you know" at least once in every sentence.

I recently made a tape-recording to send to a friend, and when I played it back, I couldn't believe my ears. I had said, "and what not" at the end of nearly every sentence.

After that, I vowed to overcome that obnoxious habit.

The husband who is tired of hearing his wife say, "you know," all the time ought to rent or buy a tape recorder and get first-hand evidence of all those "you knows." After she hears it, she will clean up her act.—SUSAN

DEAR SUSAN: You know, that's a dandy idea!

DEAR ABBY: I have two very pretty daughters I'll call "Lucy" and "Ann." Lucy is 24 and Ann is 17. Lucy is married and has a small child. The child was hospitalized recently, so during that time, Lucy stayed at the hospital with him.

I just found out that when Ann was at the hospital to visit, her brother-in-law took her home. When they got here, no one was home, so he came in and tried to take advantage of her. She pulled away from him and ran into the bathroom and locked the door and stayed there until he left.

Nobody knows this except Ann and me. If I told my husband, he'd kill his son-in-law.

Should I tell Lucy what a terrible man her husband is? I don't think he should get off free like that. Or should I tell my son-in-law that I am wise to him and that if he ever pulls that stunt again, I'll tell Lucy? I can hardly look him in the face. — DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: Don't tell Lucy, and don't mention it to her husband. But do tell Ann to let you know if her brother-in-law ever gets out of line again. Then, lower the boom on the bum.

Welch Medical Report

A new, computerized method of X-raying abnormalities within the substance of the brain appears not only to provide a degree of diagnostic accuracy unobtainable by other techniques, but has added advantages — it is safer than conventional diagnostic X-rays, can be accomplished witout requiring hospitalization, is low in cost and unlike methods that require the injection of air or dye into the brain, is painless.

The EMI brain scanner, named for the English company that developed it three years ago, takes advantage of the ability of a computer to make the calculations necessary to convert varying degrees of X-ray penetration through the brain into a three-dimensional picture of the structures through which the rays pass.

A device, which contains on one side an X-ray beam source and on the opposite side a crystal, is placed around the head. The device rotates 180 degrees, shooting closely spaced X-ray beams as it revolves. The amount of radiation that passes through the brain with each discharge is picked up and recorded by the crystal opposite the beam source.

The X-ray data accumulated by the crystal is then fed into a computer, which in turn produces an exquisitely detailed, three-dimensinal picture of the segment of the brain that has been scanned.

There are about 80 EMI brain scanners in use in the United States, and it has been reported from the Mayo clinic in Rochester that over the past year and a half, such studies have demonstrated 95 per cent reliability in detecting brain damage, tumor, blood clots, hemorrhage, injuries, infection and developmental abnormalities.

This has meant that there has been a sharp drop in the use of often hazardous and painful invasive, diagnostic techniques, which would otherwise have been necessary.

The demonstated effectiveness of this technique for "looking into" the brain has naturally led to plans for its application to other parts of the body. Clinical trials are about to begin in England and in the U.S. utilizing computerized, "whole-body" scanning.

The new system, in the same manner as it has exposed the inner state of the brain, is said to permit a similar, non-invasive cross-section visualization of bones, organs and tissues at any point in the body.

The "whole-body scanner" is described as able to clearly outline internal structures that conventional X-rays reveal either poorly or not at all, because the computer can distinguish and calculate minute differences in X-ray penetration impossible to show with ordinary X-rays.

Thus the whole-body scanner, it is hoped, will provide information about the internal structure of the body's organs, which could otherwise only be revealed by exploratory surgery.

The ultimate potential of whole-body scanning will not be known, of course, until far more extensive experience has been accumulated, but it seems very likely that we are on the brink of a revolutionary transformation of the role X rays may play in medical diagnosis.

And from the point of view of the suffering patient, it is more than comforting that this revolutionary advance actually exposes him to less radiation than conventional techniques and involves no painful or hazardous invasion of the body in order to work its wonders.

'Trash' Fish Can Be Lip-Smacking Good

Stalking the Wild Carp

The majority of folks in this country have traditionally been too proud (or too well-fed) to "stoop" to eating so-called "trash" fish such as carp. If they're properly prepared, carp can be lip-smackin' good. And you can double the enjoyment by stalking them with bow and arrow.

Hunting carp generally requires a logbow of at least 30 pounds' pull. Even with a more powerful bow, the carp's large, clearly defined scales are thick enough to make arrows glance off unless they hit at an angle of nearly 90 degrees.

On the other hand, too heavy a weapon will wear out your arm by the time you've bagged one fish. For every shot you take you're likely to have drawn six or seven times while you waited for the carp to turn to the right position.

It's just as essential to select a fishing arrow that suits the job. Solid-cast fibreglass shafts won't break and their greater weight provides better penetration of the water.

The points of fishing arrows are conical and armed on the trailing edges with welded spring steel wire projections. The heads can be double- or single-barbed, threaded or not.

There are several brands of bow-fishing reels on the market and none of them has moving parts. One example is simply an open spool with a clip at the top to prevent the line it holds from falling off before a shot. The hoop type — made with a central opening through which you shoot — functions in the same way.

You'll really need only a single additional piece of equipment ... if you want more than one fish per excursion, that is.

A burlap feed sack with a cord or small rope laced over the mouth for a drawstring makes an ideal catch bag. The floating bag should trail far enough behind you so that it won't scare your next target.

Now that you're equipped, it's time to discuss the carp's habits.... and its nature can be summed up in one word: efficiency.

The carp is a most effective feeder. Its gills are equipped with strainers so that every breath drawn also pulls in bits of algae and tiny free-swimming organisms.

Also, the carp's metabolism allows a far better feed-to-weight-gain ratio than that of most fish.

Efficiency is also seen in the carp's patterns of movement. When the water is warm and the relaxed fish are just cruising about, they'll usually move with the current (if there is any). Next to the bank, for instance, look for your quarry to head upstream with the eddy or back current.

The one time carp are extravagantly inefficient is in spawning. Like most other animals, carp become relatively oblivious of all else then, and you can bag all you'll need in one day during the height of the action. But remember — thousands of eggs need to be laid to ensure one future adult, so don't decimate the breeders.

Carp have a huge appetite after they've mated and can be stalked as they feed with their heads buried in the weeds. Sometimes their rooting will have the water so muddy that only their tails can be seen. When that happens, you can stalk to within eight feet of one of the fish and hold your bow ready until you can see the carp clearly.

Except when carp are in the midst of spawning, it pays to scout the area you plan to hunt. The most accessible quarry will be found in little coves and inlets . . . and there's a science to harvesting such waters.

If a cove is hunted from its mouth, only those fish at the open end will be scared off by the first shot. Because the shock wave made by any aroused fugitive dissipates behind it in deeper water, very little warning is passed on to the easily hunted, shallow-water fish ahead.

The most efficient manner for two people to hunt a wide cove is for them to enter at one side with the current and work toward the point, standing about 12 to 20 feet apart. The current, which will dip into the cove in a circular motion, should carry cruising carp right to them.

If waiting tactics don't result in enough action, the person who stands deepest in the water should begin an advance (leading his partner by 12 to 20 feet).

When the point of the cove is reached, the pair should leave the water and move well away from the shoreline to avoid scaring the fish. On the other side of the cove's mouth they re-enter the water and proceed as before.

One exception: in a narrow fingerlet of a cove, 200 feet or less in width, a pair of hunters would do best to enter from opposite sides of the mouth and stay on their respective banks as they work toward the tip of the inlet.

The hardest part of hunting fish is seeing into the water. I'ts best to hunt on a calm, clear day after it has been warm enough to heat the shallow waters.

To shoot at even a clearly visible fish only eight inches under the surface — the maximum recommended depth — you must compensate for the refraction of light at the water's surface. Try only for shallow-swimming carp when possible. Later in the season — when you're more experienced the fish are swimming deeper — you can experiment with "longer" shots.

When you have a carp on the line, it's important to bag the catch with as little disturbance as possible. Grab the outflowing line with one hand while holding the bowstring with your teeth to free the other. Then — moving your feet as little as possible — pull the carp close, grip the arrow and push its point into the lake bottom so the fish can't slip off.

With the fish pinned down this way, haul in the catch bag that's tied to your waist. Raise the skewered creature and stuff its head into the sack's opening. Finally it's safe to reach in, unscrew the arrow's point, pull out the shaft and let the catch fall into the bag.

Where the law allows you to harvest these "trash fish" by bow hunting, the effort of doing so is most rewarding. Just a single 30-inch fish enables six to eight people to feast on strips of fillet, breaded in home-ground white wheat flour and fried in deep fat. Ummm!

X-Ray Images from Miles Away

NEW YORK (UPI) — Doctors are harnessing television technology to transmit x-ray images for viewing on a TV screen miles away.

Now why would anyone want to do a thing like that? Well, a doctor in a small town may have a puzzling x-ray film. Is that a picture of a normal or a disease gall bladder?

Or is that coin-like lesion on the x-ray of the lung a precancerous condition? Or is it cancer?

The doctor may want a second opinion — from someone expert in reading x-ray films. The Dr. Expert is miles away. Speed is of the essence.

Well, then, the doctor from the small town falls back on teleradiology — and Dr. Expert tunes in the x-ray on a television set, giving it a onceover. Then, he telephones his opinion to the small town doctor.

Tests conducted in Boston recently show that acceptable diagnostic accuracy is possible with teleradiology.

The experiment, conducted over a 28-mile, four-leg, open circuit in Massachusetts, concluded that the accuracy was acceptable under conditions of the test and that it would improve as the x-ray doctors become familiar with the system.

The study was described in a recent issue of Radiology, Journal of the American College of Radiology.

W. Scott Andrus, consultant to the telemedicine project at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, with Dr. Jack R. Dreyfuss, Farood Jaffer and Kenneth T. Bird, of the department of radiology, reported:

"The most demanding imaging task so far encountered in telemedicine is remote presentation of a roentgenographic (x-ray) image that is adequate for accurate interpretation."

For the study, a series of 100 radiographs were selected from the hospital's files: 33 chest, 32 abdominal and 35 bone or skull studies.

Easy-to-diagnose studies were excluded. The five physicians interpreting the teleradiographs were fully trained radiologists. None had any previous experience in teleradiology.

The signal was sent through the air from Massachusetts General, via booster station to the Veterans Administration Hospital in Bedford, Mass., 14 miles away.

There it was retransmitted through the booster back to the Boston Hospital. The radiologists in another hospital location manipulated the television set controls to get the best views of each x-ray study, 28 miles distant from them.

The study revealed standard television transmission has approximately half the resolution needed to display all the necessary information.

Additional control such as zoom-in, zoom-out and scanning were needed because the television camera does not have the dynamic range of the human eye.

With the extra controls and methodical scanning of the film, resolution was more than adequate.

In fact, some diagnoses were demonstrated better on television than through direct observation.

FTC Charges False Claims By Poli-Grip

WASHINGTON (AP) — The denture wearer who uses Poli-Grip or Super Poli-Grip adhesive may leave his teeth in the next apple he eats, says the Federal Trade Commission (FTC).

In a complaint against Block Drug Co. of Jersey City, N.J., the FTC said Sunday there also is no reasonable basis for saying that the company's denture cleanser, Polident, gets false teeth any cleaner than one of its rivals, Extra Strength Efferdent, made by Warner-Lambert of Morris Plains, N.J.

The FTC complaint charged Block with making false and unsubstantiated advertising claims for its three denture products. Block and its advertising agency, Grey Advertising Inc. of New York, have 30 days to answer the complaint.

Block denied that its ads implied that all Poli-Grip users could eat such "problem" foods as apples, raw carrots, steak, corn-on-the-cob, celery, thick sandwiches, fried chicken and caramels.

As for the Polident ads, Block said they were intended to compare the old formula with the new, improved cleanser, which Block says produces 50 per cent more gas bubbles to improve denture cleaning.

Pilgrimage in Pink Draws Architectural Fantasy Lovers

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (NYT) — Beside Route 101 here, midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco, sits a building with what may be the only pink Rotary Club insignia in the world. The building is the Madonna Inn, where not only the signs but also the lampposts, Coca-Cola machines and the leather banquettes in the dining room are the same bright shade of pink.

This creamy pink, which resembles Pepto-Bismol, is the theme color of the Madonna Inn, a 109-room motel that has become a pilgrimage spot for lovers of southern California architectural fantasy since its first units were constructed in 1960.

Its builder, Alex Madonna, a highway contractor, wanted to create something that would be distinguisable from a run-of-the-mill Holiday Inn, and he has succeeded. Each of the inn's rooms has a name as well as a number, and each is decorated differently, according to its theme.

The result is a place that offends some eyes and delights others, the richest collection of stage sets since the back lot at 20th Century Fox. The rooms here range from places like "Cloud 9," a fantasy of elegance with cherubs hanging from the chandeliers, to the "Safari Room," with leopardskin bedspreads and African art.

The level of taste is not what one would expect to find published in, say, Architectural Digest, and it makes some visitors uncomfortable. But after being spurned for years by the more sophisticated, the Madonna Inn has recently come to be taken with far more seriousness. It has been published in two architectural journals since 1973, and according to Madonna, the flow of curious architects and designers to San Luis Obispo is continuous.

For the inn seems now to have achieved a place on that list of California monuments that is headed by Disneyland —the ersatz palaces that, for all their fakery and exaggeration, often fulfill American tastes a great deal better than do their more serious counterparts.

Madonna and his wife, Phyllis, decide together on the theme for each room, and then search for appropriate decorations. They have never repeated themselves in the 15 years they have been building and expanding the Madonna Inn, and they are now planning, in spite of local opposition, to build yet another inn atop a nearby mountain.

The inn is an extraordinarily successful enterprise — in spite of room rates ranging up to $55 a night, it was 97 per cent full in the last year.

It has become known as a tourist attraction, and many travellers who cannot book rooms stop for a look at the inn's pink and green dining room, its stained glass windows commemorating Alex Madonna's career as a highway builder, or its celebrated men's room, in which the urinals are a rock construction washed down by a waterfall activated by an electric eye.

The Madonnas are particularly fond of rocks and boulders, and a number of the rooms are constructed of rocks piled up to resemble cave environments.

"Caveman" is the most popular such room; it is adjacent to "Daisy Mae," reached by way of a crawl-space tunnel that joins them into a suite."

Students Go to School While Others Holiday

ARVADA, Colo. (AP) — While other youngsters lounge at the beach, take summer jobs or head for camp, hundreds of Jefferson County students remain in the classroom for what officials say is the way of the future: year-round school.

The Colorado youngsters don't go to school continuously for 12 months, but the schools stay open all year. The children are divided into three groups and classroom work is spread across the year.

Year-round school still is an experiment in the county and it's arounsed a heated controversy that may flare up again this September.

That's when the school board is scheduled to release an evaluation of the first year of the two-year project, called Concept 6.

"I like it," said Dee Davis, who has three children in year-round school. "We can go on vacation when there are no crowds."

But Jan Pratt, the mother of three teen-agers in the program, said, "I am really concerned about what effect this will have on my kids when they go to college." Mrs. Pratt thinks the system gives youngsters too much free time.

Bill White, director of instructional planning for the school district, co-ordinates the year-round program. He said 16 of 115 schools in the district now operate year-round, involving 15,000 of the district's 79,000 students. Eleven elementary schools, three junior high and two senior high schools operate for 12 months.

White said year-round school allows full use of buildings that would otherwise stand idle in summer. The main reason the experimental two-year program was started was to reduce over-crowding.

The Jefferson County system works this way:

Students go to school 86 days per semester. Then they vacation 43 days, attend classes for another 86 days, then go on vacation again.

School hours are basically no different than in traditional programs: about 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Vacations are in addition to traditional holidays such as Christmas.

White said the two vacations instead of one long summer vacation have a "refreshing" effect on students, making many of them more eager to learn.

"Either you've got a vacation coming up or you're just finishing one," White said. The youngsters can also accelerate their program in high school more easily and graduate early.

White said that several areas were so overcrowded that the alternative to year-round school was double sessions. Officials thought the 12-month school was worth a try.

Going by ferry this holiday weekend?

Here are a few tips to make your trip more enjoyable.

On long weekends, everyone seems to want to use our services at the same time. So when driving a car you have to expect overload delays of three hours or so at peak periods. But there are alternatives open to you.

First, you might consider walking aboard. Have someone drop you off at the terminal passenger area. It's a good way of ensuring that you catch the first available ferry. Or put your vehicle in the terminal pay-parking lot; but remember, this facility fills quickly during peak travel periods.

Second, you might sail by bus. Pacific Stage Lines operate a regular scheduled service between Vancouver—Victoria, Vancouver—Nanaimo. They are first on, first off and first downtown with convenient stops enroute.

Third, if you must take your car you might consider travelling in off-peak hours. The only really easy times to travel are late Saturday and early Sunday.

Ferry passengers are reminded that the final sailing on each route will be as published in the current schedule folder.

If we can help with further information phone the British Columbia Ferry Information Centre.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Back in 1742, Thomas Gray, the famous English poet, wrote a poem in which he used a line that has become classic: "Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise." If a title to this column were needed, it would be that line. The hand arose in a rubber-bridge game.

East-West vulnerable. North deals.

	NORTH ♠ 92 ♥ K 8 3 ♦ A 10 5 ♣ A J 9 8 5
WEST ♠ 8 7 5 ♥ Q 10 9 6 4 ♦ 9 6 ♣ Q 7 2		EAST ♠ K Q 10 6 3 ♥ A J 7 2 ♦ 8 3 2 ♣ 4
	SOUTH ♠ A J 4 ♥ 5 ♦ K Q J 7 4 ♣ K 10 6 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	1 ♠	2 ♦	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♦	Pass
4 ♦	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♥	Pass	6 ♦	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♠.

Had West chosen to lead a heart at trick one, declarer would have been unable to avoid the loss of a heart and a spade trick. But, quite naturally, West elected to lead a spade, his partner's bid suit. East's queen was taken by South's ace.

The ace, king, and queen of trumps were then cashed, gathering in the four adversely held pieces. Next came a long pause, declarer trying to figure out how to play the club suit. After a lengthy deliberation, he laid down the king of clubs. Then came the ten of clubs, and when West followed suit with the seven, declarer took the finesse against the queen.

The next club lead picked up West's queen. Then came a fourth club from dummy, and a fifth club, declarer discarding his singleton heart on the latter lead. Dummy's remaining spade was now led, and when East took his king, South's jack became his twelfth, and slam-going trick.

At the conclusion of play, a kibitzer who had been sitting behind South turned to him and inquired: "How come you took the club finesse? Why didn't you cash the king and ace, hoping to catch the queen?"

To which the "ignorant" South declarer answered: "When you have eight (sic!) of a suit headed by the A-K-J-10, the proper play is to finesse against the queen. My only problem was whether to finesse against East or West."

So success crowned our declarer's efforts because he had miscounted. He did not realize that the partnership holding in clubs consisted of nine clubs rather than eight. If he had perceived that there were nine clubs in the combined hands, he would have — by his own admission — cashed the king and ace instead of finessing.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

for Wednesday, August 27

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be direct, specific in connection with money, credits, special accounts. Guard valuables — refuse to give up something for nothing. Valid appraisals should be on agenda. Develop concept, submit ideas to person who knows how to untangle red tape..

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lunar cycle is such that you have new experiences, stimulating challenges. Be perceptive — read between the lines. Protect your own interests — take initiative. Highlight originality, greater degree of independence. Welcome new start in new direction.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Home, family member — and period of temporary confinement command attention. You get what you need through diplomacy. You can't force issues — or persons. Taurus, Libra figure prominently. Key answers are obtained by consulting individual who works "behind the scenes."

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasis on response from professional superiors, civic officials. Outline program and present it. You attract attention in "high places." See as is — demand factual information as contrasted to rumor. You'll comprehend!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent career, ambition, relationships which aid in making room for you at more elevated position. Get facts, figures in order; organize priorities and take inventory. Capricorn, Cancer individuals are likely to be in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Long-range projects are emphasized. Open lines of communication. Give attention to writing, advertising, special studies. You are on brink of discovery. Language barrier will be eliminated. Project is finished, whether or not you know it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money concerning partner, mate is featured. Investment procedures are reviewed as new information becomes available. Leo, Aquarius persons figure in picture. Dig beneath surface indications in order to gain greater perspective.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on legal affairs, ability to get personal viewpoint across to more people. Subtle cues are available if you "pick up" on them. Intuitive intellect provides key answers. Share knowledge because now you do learn by teaching.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Light touch wins. Know it and avoid pushing, demanding and insisting that only your way can succeed. Be willing to laugh at your own foibles. Gemini — and another Sagittarian — figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You find that getting to heart of matters is constructive — and necessary. Accent tive — and necessary. Accent is on love, creativity and meaningful changes. What was a restrictive influence could turn out to be a definite asset.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Specific subjects, demands are spotlighted. Productivity, security and value of property — these also are accented. Be analytical. Find reasons. Don't be satisfied that something merely happened. Find the "why" of events.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may be visiting, receiving visitors, checking special calls, messages. Forces tend to be scattered as you devote more time than usual to social amenities. Taurus, Libra individuals are featured — and so is music.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you make a mark, are spoiled by opposite sex, can be artisitc, temperamental, creative and stubborn. You travel this year, meet fascinating people and gain weight. In November, if single, you could fall madly in love. Married or single, this is your year of opportunity. Be selective — don't sell yourself short.

Nettles Sent Down

ANAHEIM (AP) — California Angels of baseball's American League have sent outfielder Morris Nettles to Salt Lake City of the Pacific Coast League to make room on the roster for reactivated catcher Bob Allietta.

Manager Dick Williams said they will bring back Nettles when he is more aggressive, learns "the pitchers and how to steal bases." in 102 games, Nettles batted .238 with 23 RBI's and 22 stolen bases.

'Strangest Show' Honored Rock's Best

DON KIRSHNER, the man who managed the jump from Monkees and Archies to credible late-night TV rock shows, wanted badly to put together a TV music awards show that would be an alternative to the established ones, which always manage to wind up honoring such hard rockers as Olivia Newton-John, Helen Reddy, Mac Davis and Marvin Hamlisch. What he came up with were the recent Rock Music Awards on CBS. With rock critics and FM DJs choosing the nominees and winners, the awards did rock more than pop. But the producers, wanting the best ratings possible to assure a second annual show, booked the likes of Sonny Bono, Tony Orlando & Dawn, Olivia Newton-John, Raquel Welch, and Mike Douglas as presenters. And Ella Fitzgerald was called in to present the Hall of Fame award (to a deserving Chuck Berry) only after Irving Berlin, that great lover of rock, was found unavailable.

The show's writer was a veteran of Carol Burnett and two Golden Globe award shows, and a long-time contributor to Mad Magazine who knows no rock. The rehearsals were a two-day affair highlighted by co-host Elton John's ad libs (announcing Totie Fields winner of Best Group and crediting his friend and lyricist Bernie Taupin with writing "The Ballad of Lieutenant Calley") and Alice Cooper. Alice, healed from his on-tour injuries of two months ago, looked fit and tanned after a Hawaiian vacation. At rehearsals, he sported only tan walking shorts and a can of Budweiser. His co-presenter was Valerie Perrine (David Janssen dropped out at the last minute when he was told he would come onstage in a mock-SWAT "kopter kar" with flashing red lights and Alice Cooper disguised as a policeman). Valerie, dressed in a black John Lennon T-shirt and jeans, was the perfect floozy, letting herself be dragged out of the copter by Cooper, who threw her against the podium and — only in rehearsals — slapped her rear and frisked her — thoroughly. Later, toying with the computer terminal that spewed out winners' names, Cooper marveled at the flashing lights and asked, "Is this like Spinoff?"

Upstairs in the production office, the show now just a couple of hours away, people began shouting. Bono was a no-show at rehearsal and had not called; meantime, his press agent was censoring a reference to Cher: Cooper's chauffeur had driven off without him, and a staffer was on the phone ordering four cases of Budweiser to fill the plastic garbage can in the room marked "Alice Cooper's Beer." Elton, who greeted us with eyes rolling upwards and a remark about the script, was frustrating the writer with every ad lib.

"This is the strangest show I've ever worked on," the writer would groan after yet another line change. He still knew no rock: "All the other shows," he said, "people just read their lines. Here, they're so sensitive about jokes and they're so . . . undisciplined."

PHOEBE SNOW, named best new female artist at the Rock Music Awards, has finally begun work on her second album, delayed by a legal tug-of-war over recarding rights between her new label, Columbia, and her old, Shelter. She said the material has an "outraspective" ring to it, based upon her recent philosophizing. "I'm not depressed any more," she said in reference to "dreary" comments she made in a recent Rolling Stone interview. "I'm mellow. I'm ironing out my kinks. But I'm seeing a lot of depression around me. I think people are looking for alternatives to being locked in on this physical plane — you know, 'going to work, what a drag.' And I've come across so much evidence lately on the existence of UFOs . . . elairvoyance. God, it's a fabulous fantasy, but it would make even a more fabulous reality."

Okanagan Clean-Up Pact

PENTICTON (CP) — The British Columbia and the federal governments have reached agreement on a $5 million clean-up program of water resources in the Okanagan Valley, Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve said Monday.

The federal minister said the agreement will be signed in a few weeks and the treasury board will be approached for $2.5 million for the Okanagan Basin Water Board, water authority for the three regional districts in the valley.

She said the federal government usually pays 50 per cent of such shared-cost programs.

Ottawa joined the B.C. Government in splitting the $2 million Okanagan Basin study.

Mrs. Sauve said many more dollars would flow from the federal treasury through Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. Loans to municipalities for sewage treatment plants.

CHARLOTTES PARK TAG

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 24,300-acre ecological reserve in the Queen Charlotte Islands has been named for Vladimir J. Krajina, a botany professor at the University of British Columbia.

Norman Pearson, deputy resources minister, announced the naming of the park Monday at the Pacific Science Congress at UBC.

The reserve, the largest in the province, encompasses Port Chanel on the west coast of Graham Island. It contains virgin Sitka spruce, mosses and is particularly important for its falcon rookeries.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BAXTER — In loving memory of my dear husband Jim who passed away in August 26th, 1974.
I often think of bygone days
When we were all together
The family ties are broken now
But memories live forever
If I could have one lifetime wish,
One dream that could come true,
I'd pray to God with all my heart
For yesterday and you.
—Always in my thoughts. Your loving wife, Betty and family.

CLARKE — In loving memory of Mr. Reginald A. Clarke, who passed away August 26, 1968.

The love a heart holds dear.

Remembrance keeps him dear.

9 IN MEMORIAM

CLEGG — In memory of Marion Clegg, who passed away August 26, 1970.
They say that time will ease the pain
And help me to forget,
But time so far has only shown
How much I miss you yet.
I miss your smile, your voice, your talk,
The things we used to do,
I miss the happy times we had,
But mostly I miss you.
—Sadly missed by her friend Leona.

McCLURE — In loving memory of Thomas Adams (Tommy) McClure, who passed away August 25, 1955.
—Always remembered by his sister, brother-in-law and niece.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

Gardens Never Want to Go to Bed

It is all because of the climate. People who have spent years on the Prairies and eastern Canada move to B.C. because of the climate.

They arrive here and see all the plants, flowers, fruits and vegetables that can be grown because of the climate. So they take up gardening, and soon discover that gardening is quite different from gardening where they had spent most of a lifetime, because of the climate.

The recognized practice of starting the garden in May and putting it to bed in September won't work. Our gardens, like young children, never want to go to bed, because of the climate.

Shrubs and trees are not pruned in the fall, perennials and bulbs are not winter protected by deep mulches, no fertilizer is given to permanent plants in the fall, and watering has to be gradually decreased during August, because of the climate.

Climate is distinct from weather. Weather is the day to day atmospheric conditions. Here those conditions change rapidly. Climate is the long-time over-all averages of the daily changes.

For example: The highest and lowest temperatures in any month will be on different dates from year to year. One year the month starts hot and ends cold, another year it starts cold and ends hot. These differences have a great effect on plant growth, but the climate for the month averages within a degree or so each year.

The over-all climate is characterized by windy, cool springs with cold, wet soil that keeps growth tediously slow; warm dry summers that give a fine display of flowers and demand careful attention to watering and feeding; beautiful fall weather with color and growth continuing until rains begin; mild, wet winters that turn mulch-protected plants into compost; and the occasional outbreak of Arctic cold to severely damage unhardened plants.

The hardening of all our plants has to be accomplished in the warm, dry days of August, that is why we must decrease the water to lessen the amount of new growth. On the other hand we must not let the plants suffer from drought.

In the brief cold spells, many of our plants need temporary protection, but that protection must not smother, nor must it remain to coddle the plants when the cold wave has passed. Yet it must always be ready to apply at an hour's notice, because of the climate.

No pruning of fruit trees, ornamental trees or shrubs, is done in the fall. To do so would encourage new growth in the mild wet weather that follows, and result in severe damage after Christmas.

Fruit trees are pruned in late February after the severest of winter weather has passed. Late flowering shrubs are pruned in March to April, early flowering types after the flowers have faded in late May to June. Fruit trees are "fed" at pruning time. Any food given laten does not affect the crop, but does encourage long unneeded growth and excessive foliage which delays maturing and ripening of the fruit.

Shrubs are "fed" in March for similar reasons, but annuals, vegetables, late summer and fall perennials, must be fed according to their needs throughout the growing season. But care is needed to see that their food does not reach the roots of permanent plants, those trees and shrubs which persist above ground over winter.

Fertilizer applied to permanent plants must reach the roots and be used up during the summer, hence our careful attention to watering. Any left in the soil to become available to the roots when the rainy season starts will cause the spurt of new growth we try to avoid.

We have a climate we thoroughly enjoy, and that others envy. A climate that forces us to use different gardening tactics from those used elsewhere. Our way of gardening is dictated by the climate, and many of our gardening problems are the result of not understanding that climate. It is all because of the climate.

Rebel Miners To Extend U.S. Strike

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Rebel coal miners, fresh from a run-in with police during a protest march, say they will broaden their wildcat strike to neighboring states, despite orders from union leaders to return to work.

About 40,000 of the nation's soft coal miners — 30,000 in West Virginia — have been idled by the walkout that began Aug. 11.

The protest also has drawn support from miners in Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky.

The strikers also say they will picket mines in Tennessee, Illinois, Indiana and Pennsylvania to prolong the walkout until coal operators consent to putting a "right to strike" provision in the 1974 contract.

Three Share Art Centre Exhibition

The exhibits will be on view all week, ending Saturday. Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Also to be seen is a continuing historic display donated by the YWCA recording its founding with Emily Carr's sister, Edith, as first president and its progress to date.

SOVIET SHIPS HEAD HOME

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Soviet fishing fleet of more than 50 vessels is leaving west coast waters for home ports with its catch of 150,000 metric tons of hake.

A coast guard spokesman said the chief of the Soviet fleet sent a message to the regional office of the national marine fisheries indicating the boats would leave the area "on or about Aug. 25."

The fleet arrived off the California coast in March and worked its way northward during the summer. Recently 55 Soviet vessels were fishing off the Washington and Oregon coasts with a few still in California waters.

NUMBER OF PUPILS STILL SLIPPING

The pill, abortions and a large older population continue to keep Greater Victoria School District's pupil enrolment on a steady decline.

District enrolment is expected to drop by 566, to 28,712, when students return to 56 district schools next week.

The current decline began in 1971 and is expected to continue until the end of the decade.

The trend parallels the steady drop in number of births recorded in the Capital Region in recent years, with the 2,459 babies born in 1973 an all-time low for modern times.

Class sizes will be kept the same this year, so the teaching force has been reduced by 25. The board hired 60 teacher replacements in 1975, compared with 206 in 1973.

Enrolment is expected to increase in Saanich and Sooke school districts, following a trend of recent years.

Warehouse School Finds Funding

The Warehouse School has a new lease on life.

Saanich school board agreed Monday night to back the small alternative school, which had lost its human resources department backing and was facing extinction.

"There will be a mad scramble today and tomorrow to look for a place" to hold the school, Warehouse board of directors member Al Cartier said today.

Cartier, a retired education department official, presented the Warehouse proposal to the Saanich board and won unanimous approval.

Taking the school under its wing won't cost the board anything, he said.

The funds to finance it are available from the education department and possibly even human resources, but they must be funnelled through a school board to the Warehouse, which is a private non-profit society.

The school will carry on as it has in previous years, providing education to teenagers and adults who can't fit into the regular school system, said Cartier, but now it will be officially under the Saanich School District adult education program.

The Warehouse School, started in July 1972, was one of several alternative education programs that won human resources funding after various federal grants ran out a few years ago.

This summer human resources decided to withdraw from direct involvement in education projects, and has tried to get local school boards to assume responsibility for them.

Greater Victoria school board balked, saying it didn't want to take on any more alternative projects until its present ones are evaluated.

So the Warehouse turned to the Saanich board.

The school gave up its last location, at 508 Alpha, in the spring so must find a new site.

Supply Break For People On Welfare

Sale of low-cost school supplies has been suspended until next Tuesday by Greater Victoria School District so people on welfare can take advantage of the sale.

The school district has bought enough supplies for its 18,000 elementary school pupils and has been selling them at low prices in six schools.

Community relations officer Bill Stavdal said spokesmen for welfare recipients approached district officials asking that the sale be continued after people receive their welfare cheques at the end of the month.

The sale, which started Aug. 18 and ran until Monday, will be held again Tuesday, Sept. 2, from 9 a.m. to noon.

Elementary schools where supplies are available are Hampton, Richmond, Victoria West, Fairburn, Sir James Douglas, and Blanshard.

Solo Bargaining Bid by Sidney

Sidney council decided Monday night to bargain on its own with municipal employees — provided the employees do the same — but a regional spokesman said today he doesn't think it will work.

The move by council and its 18 employees represents the first crack in a regional approach to bargaining adopted by both civic employers and the Canadian Union of Public Employees in their last round of negotiations, an approach which produced a three-month strike-lockout earlier this year.

Sidney aldermen decided to drop out of regional bargaining after getting a letter from G. R. Foley, shop steward for the town's CUPE members, confirming they plan on forming their own local.

Ald. Peter Malcolm voted against the move because, he said, sidney's contracts would be based on those bargained by the core municipalities and Sidney should try to intluence those negotiations.

Sidney should remain in the regional employers' bargaining team at least until it has evidence its employees will form their own local, he added.

The Sidney CUPE members are part of a local which includes Saanich employees.

Ald. Chris Andersen argued that the Sidney employees have taken up the matter of a separate local with CUPE officials and "their intentions are sincere." Sidney had little influence on regional bargaining in the recent labor dispute, he said.

A number of municipal employers, including Victoria, Oak Bay and the Capital Regional Board, have already approved the concept of a permanent regional bargaining agency to represent them in future contract talks with CUPE.

Regional board chairman Jim Campbell said today in response to the Sidney move that he has seen such developments happen before among school boards and they spring from an illusion.

Campbell, a past president of the B.C. School Trustees Association, said: "Small local political entities always suffer the illusion that if they go it alone, they'll do better.

"What Sidney council will be doing by itself is bargaining with the entire CUPE and I think they will be at a severe disadvantage.

"There isn't such a thing as a small independent local of CUPE. Al arel an integral part of the national organization and they simply do not go counter to national policy," Campbell said.

SOME PHONES STILL NOT WORKING WELL

Residents in the James Bay and Burnside-Gorge areas continued to be plagued with erratic telephone service today because of the rain.

A B.C. Telephone Company spokesman said most of the trouble was due to flooded manholes, resulting in water seeping through distribution cables.

He said a cruiser crew is tackling the problem and service should be back to normal late today.

Most of the downtown area was without adequate telephone service Saturday morning after a record downpour of more than two inches fell within a 24-hour period.

One-Armed Bandit Pays Big

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — The MGM Grand Hotel claimed a world record slot machine payoff Monday — a $152,683 jackpot won on a $1 machine by an unidentified local man.

The hotel said the previous record was a $70,000 jackpot won on a Reno slot machine in May.

The winner hit the record jackpot on his third $1 pull of the handle, the hotel said. The hotel has a policy against identifying winners. The same machine had previously recorded payoffs of $12,500, $15,500, $54,340 and $62,250.

OIL-RIG BOMB THREAT

LONDON (UPI) — Three drilling platforms producing gas in the North Sea were evacuated Monday in a bomb threat said to involve the Palestinian organization Al Fatah.

"All gas supplies have been shut off and the platforms have been evacuated," a Royal Navy spokesman said.

He said a man with a heavy accent, who said he represented Al Fatah, telephoned two London newspapers and said explosives had been planted on the legs of the ocean platforms, 20 feet below the water's surface.

The caller also said an oil rig supply ship in Great Yarmouth harbor had been mined.

The navy sent a patrol ship to the trouble spot and "she is in the area of two of the gas platforms," the navy spokesman said.

Slaughter In Timor

Times News Services

DARWIN, Australia — Refugees fleeing Portuguese Timor said today troops of a Marxist independence movement are mercilessly slaughtering men, women and children in the civil war sweeping the former Portuguese colony.

Australian airline pilot Roger Ruddock, who has been flown out of Timor on personal orders from Prime Minister Gough Whitlam, said troops of the left-wing front for the liberation of east Timor — Fretilin — were burning houses and killing indiscriminately in the areas they held, including the Timor capital of Dili.

"Children are being picked up by the feet and their heads smashed against the trunks of trees," he said. "And all because their parents were UDT supporters."

The UDT is the moderate Democratic Union of Timor, a rival independence movement which favors some form of continued links with Portugal.

Ruddock said 80 Portuguese commandos, all tough Angolan veterans, are now the only Portuguese troops in Timor, guarding some 1,000 refugees.

A freighter earlier reported steaming to Macao on the south China coast from Timor is still in the Portuguese colony, the Macao government said today.

A government statement said it has received a cable from the governor of Timor, Col. Lemos Pires, saying the earlier report was erroneous and that the freighter MacDili now is scheduled to leave Wednesday for the northern Australian port of Darwin with Timor refugees.

Meanwhile, Australia has refused a request by Portugal to send a military force to Timor to quell the fighting there.

Blood Supply To Be Short Next Month

The supervisor of Victoria blood donor panels predicts a blood shortage in early September.

Gerry Savage said during the summer there are three major factors which cause the diminishing of the blood supply:

—Fewer clinics open because personnel are on holiday;

—fewer donors also because of holidays;

—more traffic accidents.

"So by September, the shortage of blood starts showing up," Savage said.

He urges the public to attend the clinics held every third Monday and Tuesday at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort Street.

PRINCESS PEST FOUND

LONDON (UPI) — The mystery voice who pestered Princess Anne with nuisance telephone calls has been found out, the Daily Mirror newspaper said today.

The crank caller's identity was undisclosed, but the newspaper said a worker at the post office, which regulates the British telephone system, resigned during the investigation.

The mystery calls on the princess' unlisted phone at the Royal Military Academy at Sandhurst began last month.

On one occasion the man's voice said: "Hello Anne, it's me. I know you, but you don't know me." Another time the caller whistled "God Save the Queen" over the phone, the newspaper said.

A few of the calls were mildly obscene.

The princess has been given a new number.

Whatchmacallit Ills Internal Problems

OTTAWA (CP) — U.S.-produced Silliscupts were found Monday to be aggressive but innocent of causing financial injury to Canadian-made Whatchmacallits.

The anti-dumping tribunal ruled instead that any financial woes suffered by Whatchmacallits were mainly the result of internal problems within the Canadian manufacturing company that coincided with an aggressive marketing campaign by the distributor of the imported Silliscupts.

Compounding this situation had been a strong showing by Wise Guys, Ziggies and Mini-sculpts, imported from the U.S. by two other companies.

The products in question are small moulded plastic statuettes of usually-comical figures with humorous inscriptions which are designed as farsical alternatives to greeting cards. Retailing for about $3 each, the statuettes are aimed at impulse buyers in novelty and gift shops.

The tribunal's decision ended its three-month inquiry — which included a two-day public hearing — into whether the Canadian Whatchmacallit industry was being financially injured by the imported Silliscupts. The inquiry was preceded by a six-month investigation by the revenue department.

The Whatchmacallit manufacturer, Arrco-Saxon Co. Ltd., of Malton, Ont., the only Canadian company producing the statuettes, complained last year that it was suffering financial injury because Silliscupts were being dumped in Canada.

Silliscupts are imported by Berrie Bros. Canada, of Oakland, N.J., and distributed by L. Amram and Co. Ltd., of Toronto.

In a preliminary ruling May 27, the revenue department said there was evidence that Arrco-Saxon was being financially injured by Silliscupts, which it ruled were being dumped — imported at a price lower than the normal price in the home market.

At that time, the revenue department began collecting a "dumping duty" on Silliscupts, an unspecified amount covering the difference between the home market price and the imported price.

The tribunal on Monday rescinded this ruling, and the dumping duty now must be returned to Berrie Bros., the importer.

Arrco-Saxon based its complaint on a decline in sales of Whatchamacallits and a resulting decline in profits since 1972.

The tribunal said in its decision that the company's sales dropped one-third in 1973, when Arrco-Saxon had internal problems relating to a switch in material used for the statuettes.

During that year, Amram became the eexclusive Canadian distributor of Silliscupts and increased the product's sales through aggressive marketing. Sales of Wise Guys, Ziggies and Mini-sculpts also increased.

While sales of Whatchamacallits had not returned to the 1972 levels, the tribunal said Silliscupts could not be blamed because:

—Arrco-Saxon increased it's share of the market in 1974, along with Wise Guys, Ziggies and Mini-sculpts, while the portion held by Silliscupts remained the same.

—There was no evidence of financial injury in 1974, the year the complaint was made, and that Whatchamacallit sales actually helped Arrco-Saxon remain profitable in 1974 when sales of some of its other products declined.

—In the first four months of 1975, with the total market for the statuettes apparently declining, all the impored versions had their share of the market reduced while Arrco-Saxon increased its share with Whatchamacallits.

—The average selling price to retailers of the imported Silliscupts was higher throughout the 1972-75 period than the price of Whatchamacallits.

Goncalves Fights to Survive

LISBON, Portugal — Embattled Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves fought for his political survival today in the face of anti-communist violence and an ultimatum by military moderates for his resignation.

About 2,000 demonstrators attacked communist headquarters in the town of Leiria Monday night for the second time in 24 hours.

Army troops assigned to protect the communists exchanged gunfire with the protesters and hurled tear gas grenades into the crowd.

Police spokesmen said one man was killed and six were injured during the flareup of violence in the conservative town 50 miles north of Lisbon.

In Porto, considered a conservative stronghold in northern Portugal, a three-man National Broadcasting Corp. crew was beaten by a crowd shouting "Death to the CIA."

A spokesman for President Francisco da Costa Gomes said he had decided to support his communist-backed Prime Minister despite rumors of an impending coup by military moderates opposed to Goncalves.

An apparent nationwide power failure blacked out lights throughout Portugal today and created a tidal wave of rumors about the possibility of an armed coup.

The lights snapped back on again one hour 20 minutts later and the situation appeared to be normal.

Costa Gomes' support for Goncalves has wavered during the past week but the presidential spokesman said Monday, "Reports that the prime minister will be replaced are completely untrue. He will remain head of government."

Political informants said military moderates, headed by army chief of staff Carlos Fabiao, had given the president until today to get rid of Goncalves — with at least an implied threat to use force.

Military sources said Fabiao had proposed a new cabinet, headed by himself.

Goncalves, apparently unwilling to risk a public appearance, cancelled plans to address a left-wing rally Monday night in the fishing town of Sesimbra, 15 miles south of Lisbon.

The communists and seven allied groups announced the formation of a "united front" Monday to fight against "the return of reaction." The front called for a rally in Lisbon Wednesday night to show support for Goncalves.

BOY KILLED IN FREAK ACCIDENT

A nine-year-old boy, killed Saturday in a freak accident in a motor home at the Anacortes ferry wharf in Sidney died of asphyxiation, a corner's inquest was told Monday.

Pathologist Dr. K. R. Thornton said James Michael Lee, youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Edward Lee of Sacramento, Calif., choked to death on his vomit after he struck he head and became unconscious.

Sidney RCMP said Lee was driving the motor home into the ferry lineup at about 9:40 a.m. when the boy, sitting beside him, started to misbehave.

Keeping one hand on the wheel, the father reached over with the other to discipline the boy.

Police said the youngster apparently fell against a wood divider between the back of the driver's seat and the living area of the 28-foot vehicle hitting his head and losing consciousness. The father tried to revive him by mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

A police spokesman said charges are not contemplated.

"There is nothing at this point of our investigation to give grounds for a charge . . . it was just a tragic accident."

The family has returned home after promising to come back for the next sitting of the inquest on Sept. 3.

Lee, a California realtor, was on a holiday with his wife and their four children, boys aged 15, 13 and 9 and a girl aged 10.

Police said Lee told them he had one week left on his vacation and planned a leisurely trip down the west coast to Sacramento.

They had spent Friday night in Tullista Park, near the ferry terminal, drove to the ticket lineup and finally into the loading line for the 10:30 a.m. ferry.

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Negotiations between the city of Victoria and its firefighters broke off today, with the possibility still looming that a strike could deprive city residents of normal fire protection services.

"We have finished negotiating and now it's action time," reporters were told this morning by Ross Cameron, president of the Victoria firefighters union, following a 75-minute meeting with city manager Jim Bramley.

Cameron said the executive will present a recommendation to a membership meeting tonight, but he declined to say whether the recommendation will be for strike action or for submission of the dispute to arbitration.

He said as a result of this morning's meeting, and an informational meeting Monday with members of Victoria city council, the executive has been able to "establish a positive position as far as a recommendation is concerned . . . on what the city fears most, a strike or a (arbitration) board."

Bramley said the union indicated it was still not prepared to budge from its original demand for wage parity with Vancouver, which would involve a 21.8 per cent increase in a one-year contract. The city has offered 17.5 per cent.

The 104-member local of the International Association of Firefighters has taken a strike vote but has not served 72-hour strike notice.

If strike procedure is implemented, mediator Clark Gilmour must first withdraw from the dispute. Only after the union has been notified by Labor Minister Bill King that Gilmour has turned in his report will it be in a legal position to strike.

Cameron said today the firefighters recognize the far-reaching implications of a strike decision.

"It's not something we would enter into lightly. We completely realize the responsibility we have got," he added.

Fire Chief Eric Simmons said until the union's next step is known he would prefer not to comment on what steps might be taken to maintain normal fire protection in the event of a strike.

"It might not come to that," he said.

At Monday's meeting lasting more than two hours Mayor Peter Pollen alternate-

12% RATE FORECAST

Mortgages to Jump

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Mortgage rates have risen to the range of 11.5 to 11.75 per cent across Victoria and may hit 12 per cent for the first time this year.

A spokesman for the Victoria office of Montreal Trust said a 12 per cent rate is "a strong possibility" very soon following a decision by the company to raise its 5-year deposit rate to 10 per cent this week.

He said the company normally maintains a gap of from 1.5 to 2 per cent between the deposit rate and the mortgage rate. The fact the deposit rate was going up is a strong indication of the direction of mortgage rates, he said.

Mortgage rates hit a peak of 12.5 to 12.75 in the Victoria area in the spring of 1974 and levelled off to 12 per cent last fall.

In January the rates fell to 11.5 and then down to 10.5 per cent in March. They have resumed their upward climb.

A spokesman for Canada Trust in Victoria said the company has raised its mortgage rate to 11.75 per cent for 5-year term mortgages but declined to speculate on how soon the rate might hit 12 per cent. The company offers lower rates for short-term mortgages of three years or less.

Japanese Giant Bankrupt

TOKYO (AP) — Kohjin Co., a diversified pulp, textile and real estate concern with sales of more than $225 million a year, announced today it will apply for bankruptcy. It will be Japan's biggest corporate failure since the end of the Second World War.

The news stunned the Japanese business community, which has been hit hard by the world recession and steep oil prices. Teiichiro Morinaga, governor of the central bank, delayed his departure for the International Monetary Fund annual meeting in Washington to deal with the crisis.

Morinaga attributed the Kohjin failure to poor management but said the Bank of Japan will ask Japanese financial institutions to make sure it does not result in a chain reaction of bankruptcies.

Kohjin, capitalized at $20 million, reported sales of $100.5 million in the six months that ended in April, down from $123 million in the preceding six months. It reported an operating loss of more than $18 million in the six months ended in April.

Kohjin—founded in 1937 as a rayon producer but later diversified into textiles, pharmaceuticals, housing, paper, pulp and other lines—is tentatively estimated to have liabilities of about $450 million, or $600 million if its 39 affiliates are included.

It employs about 3,800 persons, mostly in Japan. Its only overseas subsidiary is Sarawak Woodchip Co. in Malaysia.

Smith Blamed In Breakdown

LIVINGSTONE, Zambia (Reuter) — Rhodesian constitutional talks ended here today with the leader of the black nationalist delegation accusing Prime Minister Ian Smith of wrecking them.

"Mr. Ian Smith had decided to wreck the conference," Bishop Abel Muzorewa, president of the African National Council (ANC), said at a news conference.

"We said that we would want all our people to be covered by immunity and this we put forward to him (Ian Smith)," Bishop Muzorewa said, referring to negotiations over where the talks on a new constitution would continue.

The white-minority government headed by Smith insists that the talks continue on Rhodesian soil, but the ANC fears some of its members might be arrested if the talks break down and they are still in Rhodesia.

"We believed that everybody else who participated in the opening conference agreed that this was reasonable, and then he (Mr. Smith) has not, so that actually we are waiting for him to come back to us."

Earlier, Bishop Muzorewa said the Rhodesian talks are not deadlocked and have not broken down.

He made his earlier statement after meeting here with Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda.

Before the bishop spoke, evidence was growing that the talks were in trouble and that at least the current, opening phase of the bargaining is at an end.

Sources close to the ANC made clear that the two sides had failed to agree, in talks going on far into last night, on terms for later committee sessions to be held inside Rhodesia.

Mideast Peace This Weekend?

Times News Services

Henry Kissinger flew back to Egypt today with the draft of an Israeli-approved interim peace treaty.

Political sources in Alexandria said the accord could be initialled Friday or Saturday. It would go into immediate effect.

"We are making remarkable progress towards an agreement and a nervous breakdown and it's going to be a race to see which will be achieved first," Kissinger said on emerging from a six-hour negotiating session with Israeli leaders.

Foreign Minister Yigal Allon said: "I have the feeling that during the last two days we achieved remarkable progress towards conclusion of an interim agreement and we are much closer to a positive conclusion than ever since the shuttle was resumed.

"We are no longer working on either an Israeli or an Egyptian draft agreement," Kissinger said.

"We are working on a text that is partially agreed and partially disagreed. When it is finally finished it will be the common consensus of both sides."

In radio interviews, Allon said Israel would lose one-seventh of the Sinai — taken by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war — to Egypt.

There would be a new and wider UN buffer zone.

Egyptian forces and the United Nations now occupy about one-tenth of the peninsula.

He said the Egyptian strip on the east bank of the Suez Canal would be widened from 10 miles to 13 miles by taking over the current UN buffer zone.

Moreover, Egyptians would be given about four square kilometers of territory now held by Israel to the south of the canal to give them easier access to the Abu Rodei Rodeis oil fields being ceded by the Israelis.

The foreign minister said the Egyptians have agreed to Israeli demands for allowing U.S. volunteer technicians to set up two manned early warning stations in the Mitla and Gidi passes of the buffer zone.

Kissinger, however, has said Washington would not implement the technician plan unless it receives Congressional approval.

PARAMEDICS FAVOR PACT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Paramedical workers at 81 British Columbia hospitals including Victoria General and Royal Jubilee have voted 91 per cent in favor of accepting a one-year contract providing an average wage increase of 17 per cent, a union spokesman said Monday.

Jack Campbell, president of the Health Sciences Association, said 80 per cent of the 2,500 members voted on the contract during a four-week mail ballot. The contract is retroactive to Jan. 1.

Stock-Up Warning From Supermarkets

Shop a bit early this week and stock up a little.

That's the word from a local supermarket executive as a labor dispute threatens to shut down 16 supermarkets in Greater Victoria.

Jack Fiddler, district manager for Safeway's Victoria district, said any local shutdown depends on whether meat cutters stike Super-Valu on the Lower Mainland.

There are 10 Safeway, five Shop Easy and a single Maverick store involved locally.

The meat cutters' division of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers served 72-hour strike notice Monday against 21 Super-Valu stores. The stores in Greater Victoria are part of the B.C. Food Industry Labor Relations Council, which is bargaining with three unions, among them bakers and meat cutters.

On Monday the food council served 72-hour lockout notice on bakery workers employed by its member supermarkets.

Only Safeway workers at Fort and Foul Bay are affected by that move. Most of the bread on Vancouver Island is supplied by McDonalds, which is not involved in the dispute. There are as well a number of independent bakeries.

The lockout move followed a strike at one commercial bakery last week and serving of strike notice at three more, leaving Lower Mainland consumers wihout 80 per cent of their regular bread supplies.

Council spokesman Bill MacDonald said the supermarket operators decided to shut down the 42 in-store bakeries to reduce chances of picketing by members of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers Union, the Retail Clerks International Association and the meatcutters.

If members of the three unions picket the stores, about 50 per cent of the supermarkets in the lower mainland will be closed. The nine council members operate 111 stores in the Lower Mainland and southern Vancouver Island.

George Johnson of the meatcutters said his 750-member union has not decided how to react to the lockout notice against the in-store bakery workers.

He said meatcutters served 72-hour strike notice Monday against 21 Super Valu stores, corporate members of Kelly Douglas Ltd. The notice was not served to franchise members of the chain.

He said Monday's strike notice, which will affect 150 union members, was not served as a reaction to the council's decision to lock out.

"We would have done it anyway."

About 100 members of the bakery union went on strike

Trio Reinstated At Victorian

Three members of the International Typographical Union will be reinstated to their jobs at the Victorian newspaper by Thursday, newspaper publisher John Damgaard said today.

Damgaard said he will comply with an order of the Labor Relations Board in Vancouver Monday which said that the employees must be reinstated by Aug. 28.

Chaired by John Baigent, the board hearing also found that the picketing action of members of the ITU is in violation of the labor code and must be diqcontinued immediately, said Damgaard.

The three employees — Richard Groenheyde, Susan MacKenzie and Terry Wickstrom — were discharged a year ago and a previous LRB order ruled that the newspaper "did unlawfully discharge . . . for the reason that the employees are members of a trade union."

Damgaard said the employees were placed on the payroll in response to that order at the end of July, but the ITU argued the employees were not reinstated to employment although they are being paid.

The latest round of picketing started Aug. 7.

Ed Fairbairn, president of the ITU Local 226 said today he expects to receive written confirmation of the board's ruling later today and he declined to indicate the decision.

Huge Claims Backlog at ICBC

A horrendous backlog of work awaits the 56 Insurance Corporation of B.C. workers in Victoria if their 1,400-member union agrees to a first contract.

The Victoria claims centre workers will vote at noon Wednesday in the Union Centre, 2750 Quadra, on the recommendations of industrial inquiry commissioner Dr. Noel Hall.

The Office and Technical Employees Union, on strike for 15 weeks against ICBC, is being recommended by the negotiating committee. ICBC directors are expected to accept the report. By Friday, it should be known if the strike is over.

Hall's report recommends a compound increase of 39.5 per cent over 28 months, retroactive to June, 1974.

In Victoria, OTEU shop steward Wayne Koski said he doesn't know how the backlog of work and new claims can be handled.

Before the strike, there were 32 adjusters handling an average of 700 claims a week.

"We only had sufficient staff to keep up with the work before, and then we had to work overtime," he said.

When the strike began, 4,000 claims were being processed.

Assuming 700 claims a week through the 15-week strike, there would be 10,500 back claims, plus the 4,000 claims that were in process, plus an average of 700 a week in new claims, he said.

Local bodyshop spokesman Denis Butner said "not that many" Victoria men were laid off by shops while customers parked or drove damaged cars while the strike lasted.

But asked if he expects a lot of work, he said "we surely are."

Koski said the dollars and cents of the proposed settlement are "not too bad" but the claims centres are to get a four-day week when it was originally the head office staff who wanted it, but the head office staff will get a five-day week.

He said claims centre staff will work 33 hours and 40 minutes over four days while head office staff will work 35 hours over five days.

The extra day off for claims centre people will be rotating.

Ray Warren, a spokesman in Vancouver for the OTEU, said the union executive is not pleased with all the terms of the Hall report but believed the time was right to return to work.

Since the OTEU began its strike May 20, Many of its members already have decided not to return to work at the crown corporation after strike pay ran out earlier this month. But only a handful in Victoria left.

Latest offer from the corporation included a 34-per-cent wage increase during a 27-month term while the union had been asking for an increase of 43 per cent during a 28-month contract.

Hall's report recommends the striking workers receive an increase of 15 per cent June 1, 1974, another eight per cent increase Nov. 1, 1974, six per cent the next month and another six-per-cent increase from March, 1975.

Further details of the report were unavailable.

OTEU workers had rejected the corporation's ast offer by 85.5 per cent in voting tion's last offer by 85.5 per cent in voting during the first week of August.

The strike has prevented the processing of claims and repair work through ICBC centres and has depleted a $500,000 defence fund set up by the OTEU.

Police, Fire Unions Slammed by Oak Bay Council

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith and Ald. John Goult lashed out Monday night at fire and police unions involved in current negotiations in the area.

They took particular aim at the policy position adopted by city firefighters that if they strike, they will work to protect "life and limb" but property alone will be left to burn.

They also criticized city firefighters for announcing they will picket any volunteer firefighters and said they had been told firefighters plan to turn hoses on supervisors from suburban forces who try to protect property.

Smith said Oak Bay has a commitment that it will pay its police the same increase won by Victoria police.

But, he added, the single-family taxpayer can't afford to pay 23 per cent wage increases.

And, he said, "I'll never, ever, agree to sign denticare unless ordered by council."

He said a dental care plan, (common in union contracts) is a federal or provincial responsibility and not the responsibility of "taxpayers being taxed from their homes."

He said Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen has "taken a responsibile line" in opposing, with council, an agreement reached between the city police commission and the union.

"I'm glad they've taken a tough line," he said.

Council agreed to financially support city council in its fight to stop the police union from obtaining a Labor Relations Board order that the agreement between the union and the police commission is valid.

Ald. Goult said Oak Bay has indicated to its firefighters it is prepared to accept the city settlement, when it is negotiated, in this area.

But, he added, it is a "fantastic prospect" that city firefighters are prepared to allow property to burn and that suburban forces, if called in, will also follow a policy of securing only life and limb.

There had been "threats of physical violence" to any non-union officers who perform work during this dispute, he said, saying later this referred to turning hoses on supervisors.

If elected representatives submitted to "threats of blackmail" they will have "abdicated government to elements that have showed they have no respect for persons or property."

He said the "whole thing, to a degree" can be blamed on inflation with the federal government doing nothing and the provincial goverment giving its employees big raises.

He said the San Francisco policemen, who went on strike, got a pay raise of 13 per cent which was described as a "great settlement" in the United States.

"It really puts things in perspective with settlements here of 23-24 to 34 per cent," he said.

Smith said if the provincial government doesn't outlaw strikes by policemen and firefighters "they'll be a public uprising."

Referring to threats to picket the homes or businesses of volunteer firefighters if there is a strike, Smith said "it absolutey appals me. We can't give in to this kind of pressure."

Strike Looms: City, Firemen at Impasse

ly criticized and pleaded with the firefighters' representatives.

He said he found "absolutely horrifying" their recent statement that in a strike situation they would be prepared to save lives but not necessarily property, and would picket businesses of anyone attempting to fight a fire.

"How can we sit down at the bargaining table with you when you've got a torch in your panels and say 'We're going to let you burn, you bastards'?" Pollen asked.

"Yo've got a torch, the police have got a gun and we might as well face the fact there's no collective bargaining involved," he said.

Pollen said he would not succumb to "coercive threats" and vote for a settlement which wold give firefighters more than a 17.5 per cent increase.

He told Cameron that Victoria firefighters enjoy some of the highest salaries and most generous fringe benefits in the community, and they are "part of the best-paid civil service in the world."

"I have driven by your parking lot and seen some of your wheels," he said.

The mayor several times appealed to the union representatives to take a responsible attitude in their wage demands, "to take a slice of the pie, yes, but not too big," and said this might well start a "wave" of similarly responsible union actions across the country.

"I think the buck has got to stop here or we are going to be part of the total collapse of this community . . . If we don't get some of these outlandish increases under control we are going to go to hell financially," he warned.

Pollen said while council has a responsibility to ensure that its firefighters are adequately paid and protected against inflation, it has an even greater responsibility to the taxpayers of the city.

There were 300 applicants on the waiting list to join the fire department, he said, indicating the job is not too onerous or poorly-paid.

"When you became firemen we didn't guarantee you would become the highest-paid firemen in B.C. or in Canada," he added.

Ald. Mike Young accused the union of hyprocrisy in indicating it was willing to negotiate, when in fact it had adopted the completely inflexible position of parity with Vancouver.

Cameron replied that the city itself was inflexible, and said its idea of negotiation was to ensure that firefighters were paid less than their counterparts in the Lower Mainland and other parts of te province.

To meet the city's version of negotiation, he said, the union could have asked initially for 35 per cent and worked down from that figure. Instead, it had settled on a fair and reasonable demand at the outset.

Cameron noted that only twice in the last 20 years had city firefighters been able to settle wage negotiations without arbitration.

In the current situation the union could have opted for arbitration and obtained approximately what it was asking, but instead had chosen to try to negotiate a settlement.

When Pollen said Canadian unions are not justifying their wage demands by increased productivity, Cameron argued that the measure of Victoria firefighters' productivity is the ever-increasing number of buildings for which they must provide fire protection.

Last year alone the city issued building permits worth a total of $74 million, he noted.

Mortgage Rate Nears 12 Per Cent in City

merce said mortgage rates tend to rise at this time of year. Banks normally have fiscal years ending Oct. 31.

As a result, many banks run low on mortgage funds in September and October, having gone through their year's alotlment. The scarcity of funds drives interest rates up.

For example, bank interest rates have gone up to 11.5 per cent from 11.25 per cent in the past 45 days. In addition, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce one month ago was loaning funds out to a total of $50,000 per residence. Now it has reduced this maximum to $35,000 and only to existing customers of the bank.

Whether rates will cool off in November when new allotments are made depends on the size of the allotment and the extent of the demand for funds.

Before mortgages began to soar in the 1973-1975 period, the previous all-time high was October, 1969, when rates went to 10.5 per cent. The peak was reached at the end of the bank's fiscal year, which is a normal but not rigid pattern.

Friday against Weston Bakeries Ltd., a food council member. The council then served 72-hour strike notice, effective Monday, on union members at three other commerical bakeries — Empress Foods Ltd., Mrs. Willman's Baking and Mother Hubbard Bakery Ltd.

MacDonald said the council decided to shut down the in-store bakeries because "in this way, the vast majority of our employees will not be put out of work and the public will be able to buy everything but in-store bakery products."

In-store bakery employees represent about three per cent of the 4,500 e mployees of food council members.

The strike-lockout situation follows Friday's expiration of Clive McKee's term as industrial inquiry commissioner.

He made no recommendations to Labor Minister King. His report said the sides were too far apart to make recommendations.

MacDonald said Monday he regretted the lack of recommendations because "it is my view that he failed in his responsibility to the consumers, employees and employers who will be adversely affected by this dispute."

Victoria's Admiral Rayner corps placed third among groups with 50 or more cadets.

Rhodesia Talks Break Down

bury from the conference site, saying the talks had not broken down but the next step was up to the ANC. The special South African railway train, parked on the Victoria Falls Bridge between Zambia and Rhodesia for the talks, was sent back to Pretoria.

Kaunda, who attended Monday's session with South African Premier John Vorster to lend weight to the bid for a settlement, will likely fly back to Lusaka later today. He held separate talks with South African Foreign Minister Hilgard Muller and Rhodesian black nationalist leaders.

On the problem of later talks inside Rhodesia, sources close to the ANC said the nationalist groups had made a major concession in agreeing that committee meetings can be held inside the country — provided Smith gave ample guarantees of safety to individual ANC members, some of whom could face arrest in their homeland.

The sources said Smith had rejected this and offered security guarantees only to nationalists residing in Rhodesia. This would exclude leading militarists James Chikerema and Ndabaningi Sithole, who are in exile.

The holding of committee sessions inside Rhodesia was specified in an agreement signed in Pretoria in June by Smith. Vorster and Kuanda's political adviser, Mark Chona. Smith insists that the agreement must be kept.

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Negotiations between the city of Victoria and its firefighters broke off today, with the possibility still looming that a strike could deprive city residents of normal fire protection services.

"We have finished negotiating and now it's action time," reporters were told this morning by Ross Cameron, president of the Victoria firefighters union, following a 75-minute meeting with city manager Jim Bramley.

Cameron said the executive will present a recommendation to a membership meeting tonight, but he declined to say whether the recommendation will be for strike action or for submission of the dispute to arbitration.

He said as a result of this morning's meeting, and an informational meeting Monday with members of Victoria city council, the executive has been able to "establish a positive position as far as a recommendation is concerned . . . on what the city fears most, a strike or a (arbitration) board."

Bramley said the union indicated it was still not prepared to budge from its original demand for wage parity with Vancouver, which would involve a 21.8 per cent increase in a one-year contract. The city has offered 17.5 per cent.

The 104-member local of the International Association of Firefighters has taken a strike vote but has not served 72-hour strike notice.

If strike procedure is implemented, mediator Clark Gilmour must first withdraw from the dispute. Only after the union has been notified by Labor Minister Bill King that Gilmour has turned in his report will it be in a legal position to strike.

Cameron said today the firefighters recognize the far-reaching implications of a strike decision.

"It's not something we would enter into lightly. We completely realize the responsibility we have got," he added.

Fire Chief Eric Simmons said until the union's next step is known he would prefer not to comment on what steps might be taken to maintain normal fire protection in the event of a strike.

"It might not come to that," he said.

At Monday's meeting lasting more than two hours Mayor Peter Pollen alternate-

12% RATE FORECAST

Mortgages to Jump

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Mortgage rates have risen to the range of 11.5 to 11.75 per cent across Victoria and may hit 12 per cent for the first time this year.

A spokesman for the Victoria office of Montreal Trust said a 12 per cent rate is "a strong possibility" very soon following a decision by the company to raise its 5-year deposit rate to 10 per cent this week.

He said the company normally maintains a gap of from 1.5 to 2 per cent between the deposit rate and the mortgage rate. The fact the deposit rate was going up is a strong indication of the direction of mortgage rates, he said.

Mortgage rates hit a peak of 12.5 to 12.75 in the Victoria area in the spring of 1974 and levelled off to 12 per cent last fall.

In January the rates fell to 11.5 and then down to 10.5 per cent in March. They have resumed their upward climb.

A spokesman for Canada Trust in Victoria said the company has raised its mortgage rate to 11.75 per cent for 5-year term mortgages but declined to speculate on how soon the rate might hit 12 per cent. The company offers lower rates for short-term mortgages of three years or less.

Japanese Giant Bankrupt

TOKYO (AP) — Kohjin Co., a diversified pulp, textile and real estate concern with sales of more than $225 million a year, announced today it will apply for bankruptcy. It will be Japan's biggest corporate failure since the end of the Second World War.

The news stunned the Japanese business community, which has been hit hard by the world recession and steep oil prices. Teiichiro Morinaga, governor of the central bank, delayed his departure for the International Monetary Fund annual meeting in Washington to deal with the crisis.

Morinaga attributed the Kohjin failure to poor management but said the Bank of Japan will ask Japanese financial institutions to make sure it does not result in a chain reaction of bankruptcies.

Kohjin, capitalized at $20 million, reported sales of $100.5 million in the six months that ended in April, down from $123 million in the preceding six months. It reported an operating loss of more than $18 million in the six months ended in April.

Kohjin—founded in 1937 as a rayon producer but later diversified into textiles, pharmaceuticals, housing, paper, pulp and other lines—is tentatively estimated to have liabilities of about $450 million, or $600 million if its 39 affiliates are included.

It employs about 3,800 persons, mostly in Japan. Its only overseas subsidiary is Sarawak Woodchip Co. in Malaysia.

Mideast Peace This Weekend?

Times News Services

Henry Kissinger flew back to Egypt today with the draft of an Israeli-approved interim peace treaty.

Political sources in Alexandria said the accord could be initialled Friday or Saturday. It would go into immediate effect.

"We are making remarkable progress towards an agreement and a nervous breakdown and it's going to be a race to see which will be achieved first," Kissinger said on emerging from a six-hour negotiating session with Israeli leaders.

Foreign Minister Yigal Allon said: "I have the feeling that during the last two days we achieved remarkable progress towards conclusion of an interim agreement and we are much closer to a positive conclusion than ever since the shuttle was resumed.

"We are no longer working on either an Israeli or an Egyptian draft agreement," Kissinger said.

"We are working on a text that is partially agreed and partially disagreed. When it is finally finished it will be the common consensus of both sides."

In radio interviews, Allon said Israel would lose one-seventh of the Sinai — taken by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war — to Egypt.

There would be a new and wider UN buffer zone.

Egyptian forces and the United Nations now occupy about one-tenth of the peninsula.

He said the Egyptian strip on the east bank of the Suez Canal would be widened from 10 miles to 13 miles by taking over the current UN buffer zone.

Moreover, Egyptians would be given about four square kilometers of territory now held by Israel to the south of the canal to give them easier access to the Abu Rodei Rodeis oil fields being ceded by the Israelis.

The foreign minister said the Egyptians have agreed to Israeli demands for allowing U.S. volunteer technicians to set up two manned early warning stations in the Mitla and Gidi passes of the buffer zone.

Kissinger, however, has said Washington would not implement the technician plan unless it receives Congressional approval.

PARAMEDICS FAVOR PACT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Paramedical workers at 81 British Columbia hospitals including Victoria General and Royal Jubilee have voted 91 per cent in favor of accepting a one-year contract providing an average wage increase of 17 per cent, a union spokesman said Monday.

Jack Campbell, president of the Health Sciences Association, said 80 per cent of the 2,500 members voted on the contract during a four-week mail ballot. The contract is retroactive to Jan. 1.

Stock-Up Warning From Supermarkets

Shop a bit early this week and stock up a little.

That's the word from a local supermarket executive as a labor dispute threatens to shut down 16 supermarkets in Greater Victoria.

Jack Fiddler, district manager for Safeway's Victoria district, said any local shutdown depends on whether meat cutters stike Super-Valu on the Lower Mainland.

There are 10 Safeway, five Shop Easy and a single Maverick store involved locally.

The meat cutters' division of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers served 72-hour strike notice Monday against 21 Super-Valu stores. The stores in Greater Victoria are part of the B.C. Food Industry Labor Relations Council, which is bargaining with three unions, among them bakers and meat cutters.

On Monday the food council served 72-hour lockout notice on bakery workers employed by its member supermarkets.

Only Safeway workers at Fort and Foul Bay are affected by that move. Most of the bread on Vancouver Island is supplied by McDonalds, which is not involved in the dispute. There are as well a number of independent bakeries.

The lockout move followed a strike at one commercial bakery last week and serving of strike notice at three more, leaving Lower Mainland consumers wihout 80 per cent of their regular bread supplies

Council spokesman Bill MacDonald said the supermarket operators decided to shut down the 42 in-store bakeries to reduce chances of picketing by members of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers Union, the Retail Clerks International Association and the meatcutters.

If members of the three unions picket the stores, about 50 per cent of the supermarkets in the lower mainland will be closed. The nine council members operate 111 stores in the Lower Mainland and southern Vancouver Island.

George Johnson of the meatcutters said his 750-member union has not decided how to react to the lockout notice against the in-store bakery workers.

He said meatcutters served 72-hour strike notice Monday against 21 Super Valu stores, corporate members of Kelly Douglas Ltd. The notice was not served to franchise members of the chain.

He said Monday's strike notice, which will affect 150 union members, was not served as a reaction to the council's decision to lock out.

"We would have done it anyway."

Smith Blamed In Breakdown

LIVINGSTONE, Zambia (Reuter) — Rhodesian constitutional talks ended here today with the leader of the black nationalist delegation accusing Prime Minister Ian Smith of wrecking them.

"Mr. Ian Smith had decided to wreck the conference," Bishop Abel Muzorewa, president of the African National Council (ANC), said at a news conference.

"We said that we would want all our people to be covered by immunity and this we put forward to him (Ian Smith)," Bishop Muzorewa said, referring to negotiations over where the talks on a new constitution would continue.

The white-minority government headed by Smith insists that the talks continue on Rhodesian soil, but the ANC fears some of its members might be arrested if the talks break down and they are still in Rhodesia.

"We believed that everybody else who participated in the opening conference agreed that this was reasonable, and then he (Mr. Smith) has not, so that actually we are waiting for him to come back to us."

Earlier, Bishop Muzorewa said the Rhodesian talks are not deadlocked and have not broken down.

He made his earlier statement after meeting here with Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda.

Before the bishop spoke, evidence was growing that the talks were in trouble and that at least the current, opening phase of the bargaining is at an end.

Sources close to the ANC made clear that the two sides had failed to agree, in talks going on far into last night, on terms for later committee sessions to be held inside Rhodesia.

Trio Reinstated At Victorian

Three members of the International Typographical Union will be reinstated to their jobs at the Victorian newspaper by Thursday, newspaper publisher John Damgaard said today.

Damgaard said he will comply with an order of the Labor Relations Board in Vancouver Monday which said that the employees must be reinstated by Aug. 28.

Chaired by John Baigent, the board hearing also found that the picketing action of members of the ITU is in violation of the labor code and must be diqcontinued immediately, said Damgaard.

The three employees — Richard Groenheyde, Susan MacKenzie and Terry Wickstrom — were discharged a year ago and a previous LRB order ruled that the newspaper "did unlawfully discharge . . . for the reason that the employees are members of a trade union."

Damgaard said the employees were placed on the payroll in response to that order at the end of July, but the ITU argued the employees were not reinstated to employment, although they are being paid.

The latest round of picketing started Aug. 7.

Ed Fairbairn, president of the ITU Local 226 said today he expects to receive written confirmation of the board's ruling later today and he declined to indicate the decision.

Huge Claims Backlog at ICBC

A horrendous backlog of work awaits the 56 Insurance Corporation of B.C. workers in Victoria if their 1,400-member union agrees to a first contract.

The Victoria claims centre workers will vote at noon Wednesday in the Union Centre, 2750 Quadra, on the recommendations of industrial inquiry commissioner Dr. Noel Hall.

The Office and Technical Employees Union, on strike for 15 weeks against ICBC, is being recommended by the negotiating committee. ICBC directors are expected to accept the report. By Friday, it should be known if the strike is over.

Hall's report recommends a compound increase of 39.5 per cent over 28 months, retroactive to June, 1974.

In Victoria, OTEU shop steward Wayne Koski said he doesn't know how the backlog of work and new claims can be handled.

Before the strike, there were 32 adjusters handling an average of 700 claims a week.

"We only had sufficient staff to keep up with the work before, and then we had to work overtime," he said.

When the strike began, 4,000 claims were being processed.

Assuming 700 claims a week through the 15-week strike, there would be 10,500 back claims, plus the 4,000 claims that were in process, plus an average of 700 a week in new claims, he said.

Local bodyshop spokesman Denis Butner said "not that many" Victoria men were laid off by shops while customers parked or drove damaged cars while the strike lasted.

But asked if he expects a lot of work, he said "we surely are."

Koski said the dollars and cents of the proposed settlement are "not too bad" but the claims centres are to get a four-day week when it was originally the head office staff who wanted it, but the head office staff will get a five-day week.

He said claims centre staff will work 33 hours and 40 minutes over four days while head office staff will work 35 hours over five days.

The extra day off for claims centre people will be rotating.

Ray Warren, a spokesman in Vancouver for the OTEU, said the union executive is not pleased with all the terms of the Hall report but believed the time was right to return to work.

Since the OTEU began its strike May 20, Many of its members already have decided not to return to work at the crown corporation after strike pay ran out earlier this month. But only a handful in Victoria left.

Latest offer from the corporation included a 34-per-cent wage increase during a 27-month term while the union had been asking for an increase of 43 per cent during a 28-month contract.

Hall's report recommends the striking workers receive an increase of 15 per cent June 1, 1974, another eight per cent increase Nov. 1, 1974, six per cent the next month and another six-per-cent increase from March, 1975.

Further details of the report were unavailable.

OTEU workers had rejected the corporation's ast offer by 85.5 per cent in voting tion's last offer by 85.5 per cent in voting during the first week of August.

The strike has prevented the processing of claims and repair work through ICBC centres and has depleted a $500,000 defence fund set up by the OTEU.

Burden Carries Burden As Stamps Bid for Lead

TORONTO (CP) — Willie Burden is on a hot streak.

The Calgary Stampeders running back has strung together four 100-yard-plus rushing games — a feat that has him at the top of the Western Football Conference rushing leaders.

Burden started the season with a 70-yard game against Saskatchewan, and has subsequently rushed for 159 and 182 yards against B.C. Lions, 130 against Winnipeg and 103 against Ottawa.

Canadian Football League statistics released Monday show that in five games, Burden has carried 105 times for a net yardage of 644-an average of 6.1 yards per carry. George Reed, the veteran Saskatchewan running back, follows Burden with a 4.6 average on 121 carries for 560 yards.

In the scoring race, place kickers continue to lead in both the Eastern and Western conferences.

Dave Cutler of Edmonton has nine converts, 11 field goals and three singles for 45 points to lead the Western Conference. Saskatchewan receiver Tom Campana follows with five touchdowns for 30 points. Cyril McFall of Calgary is tied with Campana with six field goals, 10 converts and two singles.

In the Eastern Conference, Zenon Andrusyshyn of Toronto Argonauts holds a 10-point lead over another place kicker, Gerry Organ of Ottawa.

Andrusyshyn has 16 field goals, four converts and two singles for 54 points while Organ has 10 field goals, 12 converts and two singles for 44.

Peter Dalla Riva of Montreal Alouettes is third with 40 points on six touchdowns and two, two-point conversions.

Running back Doyle Orange of the Argonauts is the leading rusher in the Eastern Conference, carrying 78 times for 408 yards—an average of 5.2 yards per carry, and two touchdowns.

Meanwhile in Winnipeg tonight, Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Calgary Stampeders will be looking for a share of first place in the Western Football Conference and both will be counting heavily on the power running of their fullbacks.

But before the Bombers can gain that first-place tie with Saskatchewan or break the second-place deadlock with Calgary and Edmonton Eskimos, they'll have to find a way to stop Burden.

Only One Home-Course Bid For National Junior Crown

ernie fedoruk

Home course has its advantages, but don't expect the Gorge Vale Golf Club to produce the 1975 Canadian junior men's champion.

The odds are against it.

The Gorge always has been a prime developer of golf talent, but the host club for this year's national tournament has only one threat. He is Darrell Fink, an 18-year-old who plays to an eight handicap.

The 179 other entrants, therfore, will march on "neutral" territory when the big show gets under way Wednesday.

The single entry dismays Leo Derman, Gorge Vale's secretary and the area's unofficial golf historian.

"There was a day," said Derman, "when Gorge Vale would have supplied half of the entries from Victoria. But times change, I guess."

In all, 16 players from five clubs will be representing Victoria. Uplands leads the way with seven hopefuls — Russ Reynolds, Rob Lee, Charles Fisher, Steve Leung, Wayne Little and brothers Brad and Art MacLeod.

Cedar Hill has five entries, including Victoria champion Jim Rutledge. The others are Gary Doherty, Bill Coupar, Jim and Mike Cook.

Kevin Baggott and Ted Boomer, both of Colwood, and Victoria's Brian McKay complete the district lineup.

One of Gorge Vale's most illustrious graduates is Cowichan professional Bill Wakeham. A two-time winner of the B.C. Open, Wakeham, while playing out of Uplands, was the one and only player to bring the national junior title to Victoria.

That was 18 years ago.

Noel Pumfrey came close when, playing out of Gorge Vale, he reached final in 1963 but lost, one up, to Vancouver's Wayne Vollmer at Colwood.

Originally a 36-hole medal event, the tournament changed to a match-play format in 1959 but reverted to medal play a few years ago.

The eyes this week will focus on rising stars, and most feel Jim Harrison of Islington, Ont., last year's winner, has to be the man to beat.

Others feel a pair of 18-year-olds — Sandy Harper of Nanaimo and Jim Goddard of Vancouver — are good bets to bring the title back to B.C.

The prime hometown threats are Rutledge and Reynolds, constant playing pals. Only 16 but Victoria's champion for the past two years, Rutledge has the finesse game to score well at Gorge Vale.

All the district and Island players have concentrated on "learning" the course during the past several weeks. Course knowledge will be a factor because, says head professional Earl Davies, "distances are deceiving. You're always hitting into greens surrounded by trees."

Recent rains have added a great lushness to the course, and the course is expected to play longer than the designated 6,530 yards (232 longer than normally played).

Par is usually 37-35—72. The official rating is 71.5 and the tournament committee decided to make par 71 by changing the 448-yard 11th from a par five to a four.

Expressing "due respect to the talent on hand," Davies feels a total of 287, three over par for the four rounds, "may be good enough to win it."

Capitals Reach Heywood Final

Ray Beverage made sure he won a tight pitching duel with Don Clark and paced Capital Builders to a 1-0 victory over London Boxing Club to win the best-of-five Heywood Men's Softball League semi-final 3-1 Monday at Heywood Avenue Park.

Beverage, who struck out eight batters, allowed no bases on balls and scattered five hits, also connected for a home run to supply the only scoring in the game.

Clark struck out nine, gave up no bases on balls and allowed five hits in a losing cause.

Capital will face the winner the Eagles-Tony's Holdings series, which continued tonight at 6:30, in a best-of-five final.

In the Stuffy McGinnis League, all went for nothing Monday night.

Darkness forced postponement of the second game in a best-of-three final between Ingraham Hotel and Seaboard Construction with the clubs deadlocked 2-2 after seven innings.

The game will be replayed tonight with Ingraham holding a 1-0 advantage in the series.

At Macdonald Park, Century Inn and Oak Bay Plumbing advanced to the playoff final of the Commercial Men's League.

Oak Bay nudged London Boxing Club 4-3 to take their best-of-three series 2-1 after losing the completion of a suspended game 10-9 in eight innings. The game had been carried over from the previous week with the score tied 8-8.

Len Stewart tagged a bases-loaded single to spark the seventh-inning Oak Bay rally which wiped out a 3-1 Boxer lead in the second game.

Century advanced by downing James Bay Athletic Club 2-1 in the deciding game.

Parksville Wins Lacrosse Crown

TOWN TALK

Most people who have the misfortune to drive through downtown streets on a regular basis are developing an attitude of mute acceptance to hideous traffic congestion. And no one, apparently, is more resigned than your average city policeman.

This exchange was heard over the police net on wet and miserable Friday afternoon:

Voice 1: "There's a terrific snarl-up here on Government Street. It's taking 10 minutes to travel a couple of blocks."

Calgary dog owners' whose pets soil the sidewalks are required under a new city bylaw to clean up the mess, and Town Talk happens to believe this is one idea we in Victoria should copy.

The penalty for not looking where you're walking on downtown streets is to land in deep trouble, and a stroll in the parks can be an even more unpleasant experience.

But the owners of these dogs doing their thing escape Scot-free. (More often than not, the offending animal is a poodle or other small "fashionable" pooch).

So come on, city fathers, get tough with the pavement polluters. Maybe the pet stores will do brisk business flogging dinky shovels embossed with doggy names?

. . . stripped

A little of the Bobby Riggs chauvinism may have rubbed off on Attorney-General Alex Macdonald while they were bouncing tennis balls back and forth on the Empress Hotel lawn a while back.

And the naked evidence lies in recent comments by the attorney-general on the topic of nudity.

"Nudity, as such in seclusion, where it is not offending anyone will not be considered an offence," Macdonald is quoted as saying.

"But if a bunch of naked hippies descends on a family group on a beach and are offensive to people, that's different," he said.

Town-talk doesn't intend to get into a theoretical argument about which segment of society is more likely to "descend on a family group on a beach" in this state of undress.

But what about the Jaycees, the Bar Association or even the Boy Scouts?

Especially in light of the fact that one of the most venerable of tennis players has been known to lose his kilt over a tennis match.

Car commuters who drive down Douglas each morning shouldn't blame City Hall because they're missing their usual time check.

The clock above the Bank of Nova Scotia building at Douglas and Hillside came down some days ago, along with the big Scotia Bank sign.

Most people assumed it was done to comply with the city's new sign bylaw, but deputy city engineer Bill Jorgensen says that's not so. Only the sign itself had to come down.

There's nothing wrong with rooftop clocks and temperature gauges so long as they don't carry advertising slogans, according to Jorgensen.

Last Wednesday the Times ran front page pictures of something which looked like a flying saucer in the night sky over Victoria last May. Now two experts have come up with identical explanations for that top-like image — and one more flying saucer gets shot down.

Industrial photographer Robert d'Estrube says the image is a common phenomenon, sometimes called a flare, which appears in photos where there is a high light contrast and is the result of a complicated light reaction within the planes of a camera lens.

A member of UVic's physics department agrees, calling it a caustic curve, and saying the flying saucer shape is typical of the light spot which appears in such photos.

What happens the first day in months a person rides to work in a car, after cycling or walking all summer?

Yes, you guessed. A close-shave fender-smasher at Bay and Cook gave Times staffer Norman Gidney a bump on the head Tuesday morning.

A passenger in a neighbor's new car, he planned to walk to work but got a lift at the last minute.

A wonderful morale booster for someone who's had a driver's licence — but no car yet — for just three months.

Ten-year-old Leonard Bland of 5989 West Saanich Road goes into Grade 6 this September with a real summer tale to tell.

As a guest of his uncle Jim Connor, a former Victorian, he viewed the July 15 Apollo-Soyuz space launch at Cape Canaveral.

"I'll probably have to do a write-up on it," he told Town Talk. Most exciting was the ground shaking and the booster rocket breaking away and disintegrating in a ball of flame, he said.

Pictures?

"We had a camera but it was broken."

A design by six-year-old Gillian Kelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Michael Kelly, 1075 St. David, has been chosen as one of six stamps to be issued by the Canadian post office on Oct. 22.

More than 80,000 entries were submitted in a post office-sponsored competition for drawings on the theme, What Christmas Means to Me.

The other five designs chosen are by Debbie Lovely, 12, of Perth, N.B.; Robert Kowalski, 11, of Toronto; Bill Cawsey, 11, of Regina; Lorraine Caldwell, seven, of Scarborough, Ont. and Danielle Hebert, 12, of Coaticook, Que.

One of the wierder press releases to cross the Town Talk desk last week was from John and Yael Beck of Judacullah, North Carolina, announcing they were setting off Sunday on foot and horseback to follow the 1,200 "trail of tears," the route of the 1838 Cherokee Indian migration from North Carolina to Oklahoma.

With them is their seven-month son Aur Jehovah, "naturally born amongst family, naturally fed, vegetarian mother and diet," and eight-year-old stallion Prince Hussein who "has travelled over 1,000 miles on foot and 4,000 miles by van, featured at presentations of "crystalina," a symbolic fairy tale, to mayors of various (American) Bicentennial communities throughout the U.S."

They are members of the International Aborigine Alliance Movement. Their trek, in memory of the forced march in which 4,000 Cherokees died, is to "put focus on the hypocrisy of the American Bicentennial."

Town Talk was invited to the Becks' press conference Sunday at high noon at Jukakullah Rock, Cullowhee, North Carolina, prior to their departure.

We didn't make it.

Cool McCharacter

Whatever happened to the summer of '75?

When a laddie has to haul his turtleneck out of mothballs before the end of August, when all the girls have deserted the beach, when the grass is soaking and your paws get muddy and it's not your fault you're leaving a few tracks on the kitchen floor, well, it's just a dog's life.

Jock, the Scotty, says all that and more, just with his eyes.

Good thing he doesn't know there's more of the same forecast. Week's weather outlook is as dismal as local skies at the moment, with cloud and showers blanketing whole province and sporadic rain forecast.

Art Research Gets $33,513

The Canada Council explorations competition has awarded $33,513 to Victoria groups and individuals for research into the arts.

A series of visual arts workshops will be sponsored for both artists and the public by Artsource with a $10,000 grant, the largest of seven grants to local groups.

Other successful bids for council funding are:

—$5,600 to Colin V. A. Browne, of Saanichton, to research and compile a catalogue of B.C. films made prior to 1939;

—$3,576 to Dorothy I Kennedy, of Victoria, to examine and photograph collections of B.C. Salish Indian artifacts held in institutions outside the province;

—$1,694 to Charles M. Lillard, Sooke, to compile an annotated bibliography of B.C. literature published since 1,900;

—$2,870 to Thomas Owen Moore, Saturna Island, to analyse and document results of experiments with people in the design and construction of their own living spaces;

—$4,773 to Alexandra Sager, of Victoria, to write the story of Frank E. Fredette, a Canadian boat designer born here in 1,894;

—$5,000 to the Victoria Youth Society, for the services of a co-ordinator.

Militia Offices Moving

The headquarters of Militia Area Pacific, which is responsible for the activities of more than 1,500 reservists in British Columbia, moves from Victoria to Vancouver next Tuesday.

Brig.-Gen. D. J. Anderson, commander of Militia Area Pacific, said today the headquarters will be in the South Jericho military complex.

The staff will consist of 25 reservists, 20 regular force personnel and seven civilians.

The move, which takes the headquarters back to Vancouver after five years of operation in Victoria, will absorb the former Vancouver militia district headquarters (formerly responsible for reserve units in the lower mainland region) into the new structure.

Col. L. W. Basham, a regular force officer who has been the director of infantry at defence headquarters in Ottawa becomes the chief of staff at the new headquarters.

OAK BAY MINI-BUS?

Oak Bay should consider the feasibility of establishing a mini-bus service running north and south, Ald. John Goult told council Monday night.

This would cost less than providing parking facilities at such crowded shopping areas as Estevan and Oak Bay Village, he said.

Other aldermen indicated they liked the idea. But before the idea is explored by a committee, it was agreed to get a legal opinion first to see if council has the power to get into the bus business.

Saanich to Vote Nov. 15 On $4M Works Program

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Saanich taxpayers will vote on a $4 million works referendum at the municipal election on Nov. 15.

Items to be included in the referendum were detailed at a special in-camera meeting of council Monday.

Mayor Ed Lum said today the original cost of work to be done had been $9 million but the $4 million figure was reached by paring everything but essential items.

To avoid what happened on Nov. 17, 1973, when the ratepayers rejected a $4,115,000 referendum, Lum said the referendum will be in five sections with taxpayers voting separately on each.

The first item on the referendum will be $2,650,000 for roadwork, whittled down from the original $8 million proposed by the engineering department.

Lum said only main arterial roads will be done, concentrating on the bus routes. Roads will be widened from the present 26 feet to 42 feet and completed with curbs and gutters.

Lum said before deciding which roads will be done the engineering department will make sure that underground services are completed to avoid duplication of work.

Residents will be asked to vote on $750,000 for an ice rink.

Original cost was estimated to be $1.2 million but Lum said a change of construction, which would still produce an esthetically pleasing building, is responsible for the saving.

"It will be most likely in the Gordon Head area, adjacent to the swimming pool," Lum said, adding that Saanich intended to concentrate its recreational facilities at the Cedar Hill Community Centre, the G. R. Pearkes Arena and Lambrick park.

Another item in the referendum will be $165,000 for an addition to the senior citizens' centre at Hampton Park. Lum said the addition will provide a much-needed meeting room.

"We have about 800 members now who are crowded into a room about 60 feet by 80 feet," he said.

Another $165,000 is planned to be spent on an auditorium for the Spectrum community school on Burnside. The defeated 1973 referendum had included both an auditorium and a swimming pool.

The final item is $270,000 for work in municipal parks.

Lum said, originally, the figure had been $800,000.

"This will be for the upgrading of seven playing fields and also includes a lawn bowling building and indoor carpet bowling at Lambrick Park," Lum said.

Also in the parks section are funds for providing change rooms at Lambrick and Cedar Hill, illumination of tennis courts at Lambrick, construction of two new courts at Hampton Park and illumination of the new courts.

Group Seeks $22M For Co-Op Housing

An urgent appeal for $22 million in supplementary funds for co-op housing in B.C. has been launched by the United Housing Foundation.

Directed at Prime Minister Trudeau, the foundation is seeking money to build 601 townhouses — 89 of them in Victoria — and the remainder in Vancouver.

Projects affected here are the James Bay Co-Operative Housing Association which has been working two years on its plans to build 26 units at a cost of $850,000 and the Dome Co-Operative Housing Association on Toronto Street which requires $1.4 million to build 47 units.

Both these projects are ready to proceed.

The third is the Springridge Co-Op which hopes to build 16 units but this is a member involvement group using recycled building materials and its funding needs are less than the other two.

The brief states the CMHC co-op budget for B.C. was at best inadequate. Prior to the budget the foundation estimated its needs for 1975 at $30 million. The amount provided, "a mere $10 million," was equal to the previous year.

The foundation claims CMHC "consistently returns funds to the treasury and this was the case in 1974 when $150 million was returned unused."

"The co-operatives in B.C. can guarantee that if an additional $22 million is made available before the end of 1975, it can and will be used quickly."

The brief adds: "Rejecting mortgage commitments to co-operatives who have already submitted mortgage applications as happened to Adanac Co-op on the mainland or delaying those submitted before the end of 1975 must be considered intolerable. It will delay construction starts with consequent increase in costs due to a changed construction climate and to inflationary factors.

"Co-operatives will be faced with the stark reality of starting construction in 1976 to have it plagued by the termination of major construction trade union and industry-contracts throughout the year."

There are an estimated 1,800 on the co-op waiting list.

Locally, members are pressing MLAs and MPs to support their cause and telegrams and letters are being sent to the federal government.

Twenty-nine-year-old Pat Rushford has three strikes against him in trying to find a place to live in Victoria.

He is divorced, has a four-year-old daughter and is enrolled as a student at the University of Victoria.

Rushford said these were the reasons local homefinding consultants told him they had to decline his enlistment fee. They said they would never be able to find him a place.

In a search that began in April, Rushford has run into "a hundred dead-ends" in trying to find adequate quarters for himself and his daughter Jackie.

His plight is one of the more severe cases among hundreds that are and will be emerging in the next two weeks at UVic's Housing Service offices.

UVic's enrolment will again climb and again there is a shortage of accommodation throughout Greater Victoria. Housing offers will be accepted at 477-0176, 477-0177.

Rushford was a child care worker with the Department of Human Resources in Kelowna until he decided this year to upgrade his education with UVic's Child Care program. He came to Victoria in April for three days to search for a place.

He found one, but it fell through after he returned to Kelowna.

On July 29, he moved here with Jackie to continue his search for an apartment. For the first few days, father and daughter bunked down in sleeping bags at the home of Rev. Bob McLaren of Cadboro Bay United Church. They then found a one-room basement suite in central Victoria. Rushford said the landlord, who does not want to rent to someone with a child, took pity and has allowed them to stay until the end of August.

"I just don't know what to do after that," said Rushford, adding that he has made dozens of phone calls, knocked on hundreds of doors and put ads on all the local radio stations and in newspapers.

He began classes Aug. 18 and has placed Jackie in the UVic Child Care Centre while he attends classes. During the evenings and on weekends, he and Jackie prowl the city apartment hunting.

"But what worries me most is that I may lose custody of Jackie if I don't find a place for us to stay," he said.

"I've had Jackie for the past two years — we've grown very close to each other and it would be very hard on her if she had to leave me now."

Rushford said rather than facing the possibility of losing the child by not finding an apartment, he would quit university and return to Kelowna.

Anyone who has or knows of accommodations for Jackie and her father can call 386-6998.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BAXTER — In loving memory of my dear husband Jim who passed away in August 26th, 1974.
I often think of bygone days
When we were all together
The family ties are broken now
But memories live forever
If I could have one lifetime wish,
One dream that could come true,
I'd pray to God with all my heart
For yesterday and you.
—Always in my thoughts. Your loving wife, Betty and family.

CLARKE — In loving memory of Mr. Reginald A. Clarke, who passed away August 26, 1968.
Nothing can ever take away,
The love a heart holds dear.

9 IN MEMORIAM

CLEGG — In memory of Marion Clegg, who passed away August 26, 1970.
They say that time will ease the pain
And help me to forget,
But time so far has only shown
How much I miss you yet.
I miss your smile, your voice, your talk.
The things we used to do,
I miss the happy times we had,
But mostly I miss you.
—Sadly missed by her friend Leona.

McCLURE — In loving memory of Thomas Adams (Tommy) McClure, who passed away August 25, 1955.
